Main Street Cafe: Great Food, Good Times

By Michele Broxton

As Southerners, we know comfort comes to us in many ways – from a hug to a long swig of sweet tea. At the new Main Street Cafe in Eagleville, southern comfort comes served piping hot, tasting like it just came from your favorite grandma's kitchen.

Brothers Brad and Randy Ganues are thrilled to brave the winter and economic conditions to bring their vision to life in Eagleville, TN. "We are so excited to serve Eagleville and the surrounding communities," said Brad, longtime healthcare professional with an excellent reputation for fairness and fun. "The food is great and the price is right."

With more than 30 years in the food industry, Randy is a capable and proven restaurateur. "Randy has a reputation for great food and running a great restaurant," said Brad. Great food, indeed. With a menu that sounds like Christmas, Thanksgiving, and your favorite Sunday dinner rolled into one, Main Street Cafe is sure to have something to please everyone.

In popular southern tradition, Main Street Cafe will offer a phenomenal meat & three. Fried chicken will be available every day, plus a rotating menu of country fried steak, grilled chicken breast, and meat loaf, with catfish on Fridays. Guests will have a fantastic selection of home cooked side dishes every day including: fried okra, corn, green beans, hash brown casserole, pinto beans, hand-peeled mashed potatoes and gravy, creamy coleslaw, turnip greens, macaroni and cheese, vegetable of the day and two homemade soup choices daily. Top it all off with your choice of homemade biscuits or cornbread and then you'll be ready for a mouth-watering dessert such as cream pie, ice cream or cobbler. Yum!

Dinner specials include the lunch menu plus a traditional meal of steak or country ham and fresh biscuits. The kids menu offers chicken strips, hotdogs, and other kid favorites. During lunch and dinner, an "Off the Grill" menu of cheeseburgers, hamburgers, bacon cheeseburgers, and boneless chicken sandwiches is sure to tempt your taste buds. On Friday and Saturday nights, wind down your week with live music and a delicious meal!

On the go? Main Street Cafe guests have the option to grab something quick or sit down for a longer visit. In one part of the cafe, guests can order subway-style deli sandwiches as well as pizza by the slice or whole," said Brad.

Need some southern comfort in the morning? No problem. Main Street Cafe will offer a Sunday brunch menu that includes: made to order omelets, pancakes, Belgium waffles, and fruit selections.

Brad Ganues (L) and Randy Ganues (R) pictured in front of the new Main Street Cafe. Main Street Cafe, a fabulous meat & three with a "to go" and Sunday brunch menu, will open to the public on February 14 at 10 am

Main Street Cafe's doors open February 14thth at 10am! Main Street Cafe will be open to serve you Monday through Thursday 10am – 8pm, Friday and Saturday 10am – 9pm, and Sunday 10:30am - 4pm.

"The decision to open a restaurant in Eagleville felt like a scene from Field of Dreams," grinned Brad. "If you build it, [they] will come". In our case, the voice turned out to be Sam Tune, Mayor of Eagleville, instead of Shoeless Joe Jackson."

A Message From Your Mayor

I don't have to tell anyone, EAGLEVILLE is a very special city and community. Special places exist only because special people have city and community pride. There are so many talented people in the area; I believe almost anything could be accomplished with a combined effort.

Our school, every year, brings a new level of accomplishments. Mr. Key and a group of hardworking dedicated young men have gotten the attention of other schools in the county and state. Our wrestling team is second to none other. They have made major accomplishments in just a short time. They represent our school and city with pride.

Our police department has done an outstanding job with safety awareness. These men work hard everyday to make Eagleville and Rutherford County a safe environment for all of us to live. They are here to help each and everyone of us. Call City Hall or the police department; these men will be glad to come by your home or business to visit and make you more aware of how each of us can contribute to the safety of our city and its citizens.

Recently our police department broke up one of the largest theft rings in Middle Tennessee. This would have never happen if it were not for Chief Barrett's investigation. He and Officer Leathers are solely responsible for recovering many thousands of dollars in stolen property, some stolen from homes here in Eagleville. Our police department lead the investigation and made other law enforcement agencies aware of the theft ring. If it were not for our police department the case would have not been solved.

As we continue to provide better service and safety, our fire board recommended to the city council the hiring of our new Fire Chief. The council unanimously voted to hire Terry Greene to fill the position. Terry has been with the fire department for several years and will continue to be very valuable with his knowledge and dedication to our city.

Mr. Jeff Mooneyham is working and planning for another season at our city park. Please contact him for sign ups, as the teams and schedule work is under way.

Community and civic pride is something that can not be taught, you have to have it and want it. It is like pride in ownership. We all like to see our yards, landscape and automobiles look good. As our athletic teams step on fields and courts, their uniforms burst with pride as they are proud of their hard work and their efforts to please us all by winning and exhibiting quality sportsmanship.

Recently GNRC sent out a survey to homes in the first phase of the projected sewer line installment. Most people will agree sewer is essential for the health of our city as well as to help our city prosper. It is also very valuable for our school, as the current system the school has is old and in continual need of maintenance. It is very important that each of you return this survey. The purpose of the survey is to obtain grant money, free money that we do not have to pay back. Each survey is worth approximately $22,000 per household. If we can qualify for the grant it could amount to as much as 1.6 million dollars for money that the city will NOT have to pay back. Please, it is so important that each of you return your survey. Your survey goes directly to Nashville; no one in Eagleville will have any knowledge of the information that you provide on the survey.

If you have lost or misplaced the survey, contact or call Mrs. Von Almen at City Hall and she will provide you with another one.

Please patronize our local merchants. Help them to be successful so they can better serve you. Support our school and their continued efforts and thank you for supporting our city.

If I can assist, call my personal cell number (615) 849-6509

Performance of "Mrs. John Marsh" (a.k.a. Margaret Mitchell) Williamson County Public Library

FRANKLIN, If you ever read or want to read Gone With the Wind, this is an opportunity to learn about the author of this epic tale of the Civil War. The Southern Writers' Theatre will present a reading of "Mrs. John Marsh," a one-actor play about Gone With the Wind author Margaret Mitchell. The reading will take place at 6 p.m., Thursday, March 17 at the Williamson County Public Library.

Mitchell's writing of Gone With the Wind was built on the many aspects of her life as a native southerner, a woman, a journalist, and on her Irish ancestors. "Mrs. John Marsh," written by Atlanta playwright Melita Easters and played by Kandace Christian, a local actor, brings to life a span of 90 years of the history, as well as the three wars that those years enveloped, of the nation in which we dwell. The production will be directed by Dr. Jamie Cutler, actor, academician, playwright, and Grammy-nominated song writer.

Williamson County Public Library has been the sponsor of numerous play productions, concerts and other educational programs. The program is free and open to the public. The Williamson County Public Library is located at 1314 Columbia Ave., Franklin, Tennessee.

Sen. Tracy reappointed Chairman of the Senate Transportation Committee

State Senator Jim Tracy (R-Shelbyville) has been reappointed Chairman of the Senate Transportation Committee. The announcement was made by Lt. Governor Ron Ramsey as the 107th General Assembly convened for the 3rd day of the organizational session in Nashville.

In addition, Senator Tracy was also appointed Vice-Chairman of the Senate State and Local Government Committee and will remain a member of the Education Committee.

"I appreciate the confidence that Lt. Governor Ramsey has placed in me to serve again as chairman of this committee" said Sen. Tracy. "Transportation needs are always a key issue, especially as our state struggles financially. Roads are essential to economic development. We must find solutions to help provide the infrastructure to bring new jobs to our state, which is critical as we navigate through these trying economic times."

The organizational session is scheduled to be completed on Saturday. The General Assembly will then take a brief recess to make office assignments before taking up business in the regular 2011 legislative session.

Zocco Set Her Sights On An Expert Rating

In the beginning of 2010, 16 year-old Olivia Zocco set her sights on earning a Distinguished Expert rating in the Handgun Category through the Winchester/NRA Marksmanship Qualification Program. Using a semi-automatic .22 caliber pistol, Zocco was able to reach her goal by the end of the year and shared her story and photos with NRAblog.

Olivia Zocco, daughter of Chris and Tracy Zocco, is a Junior at Eagleville High School. She currently holds a 4.0 GPA, is involved in Student Council, serving as Treasurer.

Olivia was introduced to pistol shooting by her grandparents who both worked in law enforcement. She started shooting with them several years ago just for fun. She started working on her Winchester/NRA Marksmanship Qualification certifications in January of 2010 with the goal to make Distinguished Expert by the end of the year. On November 21, 2010, Olivia achieved this goal.

"I may look into competitive pistol shooting in the future, but for now I am just happy to have achieved this goal," says Olivia.

Congratulations on earning Distinguished Expert, the highest rating in program, Olivia! To learn more about the Winchester/NRA Marksmanship Qualification Program and view the courses of fire, check out the program's website or send an email to marksmanship@nrahq.org.

Jackie & Don Fargo - Heros Of Wrestling

Recently, while looking through some of my files, I found the following article written in 1991 by Toad Fraley, a former world's wrestling champion. In this article, he describes a wrestling match held in Eagleville, where he and his father, Pat Fraley teamed up against Jackie and Don Fargo.

Don & Jackie Fargo

THE DAY WE KILLED EAGLEVILLE

By Toad Fraley

As a professional wrestler I had over 1100 matches, and contrary to general public belief in only three of those was the result belief in only three of those was the result belief in only three of those was the result pre-arranged. One of them happened in a place called Eagleville, Tennessee.

It was May 1959. My dad, Irish Pat Fraley, and I had been on the road for 18 months. We were in the South, and our booking office was in Nashville. Every week we had to go there to get the booking slips telling us where and who we were wrestling that week. When we found out that we were booked in Eagleville against Don and Jackie Fargo, we had to look it up on the map. It's a small town about 25 miles south of Nashville.

When we arrived we couldn't believe our eyes. We had been booked to wrestle in a vacant supermarket. It seems there were two weeks from the time the old tenant moved out and the new occupant was to move in, and someone saw a chance to make a fast buck by filling the void with pro wrestling. We walked into the empty building and the first thing we noticed was the low ceiling. When we got into the ring it was only eight or so inches above our heads. There was no light over the ring, just an empty light socket. In each corner of the ring was a portable light stand that shined directly into our eyes.

Our dressing room turned out to be the men's room. The Fargos and the referee had the ex-store manager's office. I never saw my old man so upset. "This," he said, indicating our surroundings. "is a bunch of bull. Somebody's gonna get hurt out there unnecessarily, and it's not going to be me. When the Fargos get here, we're having a talk."

When Don and Jackie arrived, we knocked once and walked into their dressing room. They were sitting there looking as disgusted as us, and Jackie said, "we were kinda expecting you guys. Is this ridiculous, or what?"

We were joined then, by the referee, an ex-wrestler named Danny Dusek, a cousin of the famous Dusek Boys out of Omaha. He was surprised to find all four of us together in the same room, and asked what was going on. "We've got a problem," I answered. "Have you seen that mess out there?"

"Yeah, and it's just plain embarrassing," agreed Danny. "What you think we ought to do, Pat?" As Dad was the elder statesman of the group, we just naturally looked to him for guidance.

"I think," the old man said after due deliberation, "that we should kill the town." "Kill the town!" echoed Jackie Fargo and Danny Dusek thoughtfully.

There was a moment of silence that I finally broke with a question: "How in the hell do you kill a town?" I wasn't as experienced as the rest. Dad put me to school right there.

"By making sure nobody comes back," he said. "You give the crowd such a ridiculous and absurd match that they never come back again."

We all looked at one another. Everyone nodded in approval. Then the four of us sat down to plot the demise of Eagleville, Tennessee.

The program called for me to wrestle one of the Fargos in the opening match, followed by Dad versus the other one in the second bout. Then there was to be a 30-minute intermission filled by the other featured attraction of the night, a guy who called himself The Indian Rubber Man; and then the Fraleys against the Fargos in a tag-team match. We and Jackie and Don had agreed that they would win the single matches and we would win the tag-team event. The first bout started at 8'oclock, and by 8:20 the Indian Rubber Man was in the ring.

Where they got him, I'll never know. He wore street clothes, and some war paint on his face. We watched from the wings and couldn't believe our eyes. The Rubber Man stood in the middle of the ring with his arms straight out, palms together. Then he swung his right arm around several times like a windmill, and when he straightened it again the arm was extended about three inches further than the left one. He repeated this six times until his right arm was 15 inches further out than the left. We were supposed to think that every time he swung that arm around he was dislocating his shoulder to make the arm longer. Finally he reversed the process to make both arms equal again. The crowd ate it up.

I started the tag-team match for our side, and after a few minutes tagged the old man. He took Jackie Fargo to the mat and applied a hammerlock with very little pressure. Jackie hollered as if in great pain and reached to tag his brother, but he was too far away. I was watching Dad and Jackie in the ring when the crowd called our attention to the Fargos' corner. "He's dislocating his shoulder!" They screamed and when I look over, what I saw almost made me fall off the ring apron. There was Don Fargo standing with both arms extended, ala the Indian Rubber Man, whirling them around to extend his reach 15 feet across the ring to tag his brother.

I put my head into the crook of my arm because I knew I was going to lose my composure. Then Danny Dusek ran over to Don and yelled, "Are you dislocating your arms?" "No," insisted Don, standing there with his right arm about a foot and a half in front of his left. Honest, I'm not."

Just then Dad picked up Jackie Fargo for what seemed like either an airplane spin or body slam. "Oh no, Dad, there's not enough room," I thought, "the ceiling's too low!" But Dad had something else in mind that was never done before and surely has never been done again in wrestling. Instead of throwing Jackie, Dad put him up on his shoulders and stood straight up, so Jackie's back was pressed flat against that low ceiling. Dad looked at Danny Dusek and then Dusek looked up, slapped the ceiling three times and declared Dad the winner of the first fall. The crowd went wild.

After a brief rest period I told Dad, I'd start the match for the second fall. I figured there was no way he could top that first fall, so I'd give him the rest of the night off. Don Fargo grabbed me by the hair and then loosely applied a wristlock. I glanced up and saw right above us that empty light socket. When I pushed my arm up like he was forcing it, Don looked up and got the message. He took my finger and pretended to jam it into the light socket. I started crossing my eyes and shaking all over, and the crowd went nuts. "He's electrocuting him!" they screamed. Dusek let it go in about a minute and then finally broke it up. Fargo dropped me to the mat and Dusek disqualified him. We had won the match. It was only 9:05, and the Indian Rubber Man had done his thing for a half-hour. There could be no question about it; as far as wrestling was concerned, Eagleville was dead and buried.

When we went to the booking office the next Monday, the promoter wanted to see us. "Here it comes," said Dad. "We're gonna catch hell now." Only this time we were in for a real shock. "I don't know what you guys did in Eagleville last Thursday," said the promoter, "but the phone has been ringing off the hook.

"You boys must've had a helluva match, because this Thursday's card is already a sellout. We're re-matching you and the Fargos."

When the power of speech returned, Dad told him that we were already booked in an important TV match over in Bowling Green, Ky. "Sure wish we could make it," he lied. The promoter went for it, but said the Fargos would have to be there for sure.

On the way home Dad just shook his head and said, "I can't believe it!" Then he snickered and wished we could be there when Don and Jackie Fargo learned they were due back in Eagleville for another match.

A week later we passed through Eagleville and came across a poster still up from the matches held the night before. THE FABULOUS FARGOS RETURN, it said. And underneath, almost as big, it announced, "Making a return appearance by popular demand—THE INDIAN RUBBER MAN! YOU HAVE TO SEE IT TO BELIEVE IT!"

We broke out laughing and the old man said, "You can say that again!"

* * * * *

After reading this article, I remembered attending the wrestling matches, when the Fargos and others wrestled in the old theatre-skating ring building, located next to the former Puckett's Grocery on the north end of Eagleville. I began to wonder whatever happened to the Fabulous Fargo duo. After a search on the internet, I located Jackie Fargo living in China Grove, North Carolina, and telephoned him. When asked if he remembered the matches in Eagleville, he began to tell me what a nice little town Eagleville was and he enjoyed coming here to wrestle. I told him about the Fraley article and mail him a copy, which he later told me, brought back a lot of memories and also he and one of his wrestling friends got a good laugh from it.

The first time I talked with Jackie; a reporter from the Nashville Tennessean was at his home for an interview on an upcoming appearance in Nashville. He and his old teammate, Don Fargo, was to be honored at a Memorial event, to be held in memory of their former promoter, Nick Gulas, who died in 1991.

Jackie Fargo, whose real name was Henry Faggart, and his teammate for several years, Don Fargo, (Donald Vincent Kalt), were in Nashville on January 15th, 2011 for this event. Since the duo went by the name, Fargo, had long blond hair and dressed exactly alike, including their jewelry, it was assumed by many, they were brothers. Jackie's older brother, Jack Faggart, (Sonny "Roughhouse" Fargo) did later join him in the wrestling profession. Over the years there were several wrestlers who took the name Fargo, only two, Jackie and Sonny, were from the Faggart family.

Attending the Gulas Memorial, in addition to the Fargos were semi-retired Robert Lee "Beautiful Bobby" Eaton, who made his debut in 1976 and Gypsy Joe (Gilberto Melendez) who started wrestling in the United States in 1963 after a lengthy career in Puerto Rico. In 2007, WWE Magazine named him, the world's oldest wrestler at the age of 73. Continuing to wrestle at least once a week, Gypsy Joe recently retired.

The Fargos, Eaton and Gypsy Joe were all honored in the center ring of the HWA Arena in LaVergne and presented with appreciation certificates by George Gulas. To please the crowd, the ever famous strutt was performed again by the Fabulous Fargos.

Jackie and Don Fargo were the hottest tag team in the country in the late 1950s and early 1960s, selling out arenas from New York to Alabama, strutting to the ring, with world titles wrapped around their waist.

Jackie was the first to get into wrestling, starting on a small Southern circuit around 1950. He headed to Cuba, making $250 a week in 1952, before Uncle Sam tapped him for service in the Korean War. Returning to wrestling and teaming with numerous wrestlers during his career, Faggart, (Jackie Fargo) was most successful with Don Kalt (Don Fargo) a former Pittsburgh bodybuilder, who together, won the Chicago and Georgia versions of the NWA World Tag Team titles in 1958 and dominated the National Wrestling Alliance during late 1950s; their match against Argentina Rocca and Miguel Perez, witnessed by a record breaking 20,125 people at Madison Square Garden on March 30, 1957, drew the first 20,000-plus crowd in the history of Madison Square Garden.

The "Fabulous Fargo Brothers" had already reached the pinnacle of pro wrestling when they arrived in Nashville in 1957 to fulfill a four-week contract with local promoter Nick Gulas.

Neither Jackie nor Don Fargo had ever been to Nashville and had no idea what to expect from the wrestling community. "All we knew about Nashville was, that's where all the country singers were," said Don Fargo.

"I really, had not planned on staying there but four or five weeks," said Jackie. "We were headed for Texas after those four weeks were up and Mr. Gulas talked us out of it. We ended up staying in the area for 30 years. The fans didn't like us and we loved that."

Local wrestling's popularity was enhanced by television in the 1950's when the medium was new to the region. Fans watched it on Saturday and went to wrestling events at the Hippodrome weekly, as well as matches, held throughout the region at high school gymnasiums and National Guard Armories.

According to George Gulas, his dad, Nick Gulas, had open arms for the Fargos and for Tojo Yamamoto and they realized they could make money and live here indefinitely. Jackie, Don and Tojo became the building blocks for wrestling in Nashville."

Tojo Yamamoto (Harold Watanabe) who became one of wrestling's best-known villains, died in 1992 at age 65 of a self-inflicted gunshot.

Don and Jackie wrestled on and off as a team until 1965, when Don turned into wrestling's greatest quick-change artist. He was a shoot-em-up cowboy with the Daltons, a biker tough with the Chain Gang, a bleached blond with Greg Valentines as The Fargos redux, a mercenary with the Legionnaires and even a Fonzie character, based on the "Happy Days" sitcom, at one point. Don Fargo, who is 82 years old, wrestled through the 1990s and presently lives in Florida.

During the 1960s, Jackie Fargo won the NWA Georgia Tag Team title with Joe Fargo and Mario Milano as well as enjoying numerous title reigns capturing the NWA Southern Tag Team title with Don Fargo, Lester Welch, Tex Riley, Mario Milano, Sonny Fargo, Len Rossi, Dennis Hall, Jerry Jarrett, Mr. Wrestling and Lou Thesz. Also in the 70's various tag team mates were Don Green, George Gulas and Tojo Yamamoto and numerous others. In the meantime, Jackie became one of the first true villains in the squared circle to switch to good guy status. After wrestling 30+ years, Jackie Fargo retired in 1987.

In 2009, Jackie and Don were reunited after 20 years at the NWA Fanfest in Charlotte, North Carolina where they, along with Jackie's brother, the late Sonny Fargo, were inducted into the NWA Wrestling Legends – Hall of Heroes – Class of 2009.

In all my conversations with Jackie, age 80, he stresses the point that "God has really blessed him, he's in good health and enjoys every day. He stays very active, playing golf, traveling and often performing charity work. Several years ago Jackie spoke at a testimonial program at the Eagleville Baptist Church, and many other churches throughout the South. He is still very much in demand at many events throughout the year.

Heart-Felt Valentine's Meal - Make up a batch of heart-shaped pancakes for a yummy Valentine's breakfast or brunch. Just pour the batter in the frying pan in a free-form heart shape and serve with strawberries and whipped cream.

Balloon Goodies - Insert candy surprises into balloons before inflating them - add a folded-up Valentine's message then inflate each balloon. Tie with a red ribbon and attach to your loved one's chair for them to find Valentine's morning.

The Gift of Time - Give a hand-made coupon for some work you can do to free-up some time for your spouse or parent. For example, a coupon good for cleaning Dad's garage or for a full-house vacuuming for your wife. How about a coupon for your best friend - you can walk her dog or baby sit one evening.

Coupon Day - Each of you can create individual notes, say 4 or 6 each, to describe a special surprise - a back rub, a bubble bath, kisses from head to toe, a special meal - fold up the notes and toss them into a jar. You can take turns having fun plucking a coupon from the jar and doing what it says.

Scavenger Hunt - You can prepare this one for your spouse or for your children to enjoy. Write up little notes about how you feel and what they mean to you and place them around the house along with a candy heart or other treat. Add a riddle at the end of each note about where to find the next note. At the last note, have something special waiting there. For example, you can be waiting for your hubby in a candle-lit bubble bath with two glasses of wine. For your children, then can find a teddy bear or other toy or treat.

Less Fortunate - Visit a hospital or chronic care home to pass out small Valentine surprises to the residents. They will enjoy the care and attention from something so unexpected.

Picnic Fun - Place a blanket on the floor near the lit fireplace with candles on the mantle and have your Valentine's meal as a candle-lit picnic with a bottle of your favorite bubbly.

A Cereal Surprise - Sneak in love notes and chocolate kisses in your sweetheart's or children's cereal.

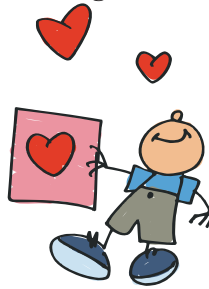

Notables - Little notes in their lunch boxes, on the bathroom mirror, in his briefcase, stuck on the car windshields, in his underwear drawer.

I'm fortunate to have you! - Mix up a batch of fortune cookies and add your own little words of love.

Valentine Sharing - Plan some community work - help out at the local shelter, volunteer at your local church, work with other volunteers to spread some caring amongst your community.

All in the Family - Spend some quality fun time with your niece or nephew or other child in your family.

Poetry In Motion - Write him or her a poem. Place it on your loved-one's night table for when they awake!

THE BUZZ AROUND CO-OP

GROUNDHOG DAY

February is the shortest month of the year and the celebration of Groundhog Day. Groundhog Day proponents throughout North America wait to see the winter predictions of such rodent's forecasts and state they are accurate 75% to 90% of the time. The official first day of Spring is about 7 weeks after Groundhog Day.

Here at the Co-op, we spend our winter days planning for Spring planting days. We have learned how to take advantage of the weather in many ways and it's benefits. Planning for our pastures allowing the livestock to acquire their own feed through grazing is the most efficient way to provide these nutrients. These pastures provide good quality forage over a good portion of the year but they can be improved. One of the best and easiest ways is to add legumes such as clover to the pasture.

In Scotland it's said the Groundhog Day tradition may have come from an English poem like this one:

As the light grows longer
The cold grows stronger

If Groundhog Day be fair and bright
Winter will have another flight

If Groundhog Day be cloud and rain
Winter will be gone and not come again

A farmer should on Groundhog Day
Have half his corn and half his hay

On Groundhog Day if thorns hang a drop
You can be sure of a good pea crop

~ Author Unknown

Benefits of clovers:

1. Increase yield
2. Improved animal performance
3. Nitrogen fixation
4. More summer production

February and the first weeks of March are an excellent time to plant your clovers. This is an easy way to start preparation for a successful grazing season.

Sonny and Bobbie Sue Lonas recently vacationed in Southern California. Being present at the 2011 Rose Bowl Parade in Pasadena, was the high light of the trip. They also attended the up-close viewing of the floats, held the day after the parade. Other points of interest visited were the Ronald Reagan Presidential Library & Museum, Hollywood, Rodeo Drive in Beverly Hills, downtown Los Angeles, dinner-show on the Queen Mary, dinner at the famous Lowry's Prime-Rib Restaurant and a day tour of Catalina Island.

Christmas Celebration - On Sunday, December 5th, the John Turner Family got together for the first Christmas gathering. This included a visit from Santa Claus. The great grandchildren got to give Santa a list of what they wanted for Christmas. This has been a tradition since 1986. The grandchildren decorated a tree and Santa came to get their list. Although thirteen family member were unable to attend, a good time was had by all.

Your acres are unique. Your crop insurance should be too.

Your farm or farms are unique. You only have to walk the land to understand. That is why it makes sense to have crop insurance just as unique to maximize profits and protection.

Knowledgeable Crop Insurance Specialists from Farm Credit Services of Mid-America can help you with individualized plans. We don't believe in "cookie-cutter" solutions that treat your farm like just one of the herd. We listen to what you want to achieve with every single acre. Then we customize coverage on your farm.

Our specialists don't work on commissions, so they are always looking for coverage that meets your goals at the most affordable cost. Your premium isn't the most important thing in their eyes—it's your coverage.

Every year, important changes in farm programs can have significant bearing on how crop insurance works for you. We keep up-to-date on those changes, and we'll make sure to tell you about them and how they affect your plans.

When you're working with an FCS Crop Insurance Specialist, you can count on:

- Dedication to your unique farming operation.
- Year-round focus on crop insurance. We are not involved in other lines like property/casualty.
- 92 years of experience working with farmers. FCS' partnership between lending staff and crop insurance staff will bring the best tools and solutions to you.

Price, yield and profit protection. Fast response to your claims. Value-added services like farm mapping. People you can reach when you pick up the phone. That's what you want, and that's what you deserve on each unique field.

Call us today, and we'll make sure you get it, because every acre means a lot.

Appreciation Lunch Hosted by Troop 1588

Girl Scout Troop 1588, of Eagleville, had an appreciation lunch for the teachers and staff at Eagleville. This was their way of saying thank you to everyone at Eagleville for all they do and to show how proud they are to be a part of Eagleville.

The main focus was a salad bar. This also helped the girls earn their Healthy Habits badge. The girls worked very hard o theis and really enjoyed putting it together.

We are now taking ordrer for Girl Scout Cookies. The price is $3.50 and will be in on Saturday, February 12th. If you would like to help Troop 1588, please call us at 274-2795 or 631-2327.

NEWS from MS. HILL'S THIRD GRADE

After a nice Christmas break and lots of snow days in January we are looking at many exciting weeks ahead in February and March.

We are beginning to write some of our assignments in cursive, have learned all of our multiplication facts, completed four of our six book reports, and are now working toward meeting our reading goals to earn a free ticket and trip to a Sounds baseball game in April. As you can see we are very busy.

We are also very happy to welcome Lane Hulshof to our class. Everyone is glad to have such a wonderful new friend.

The last grading period, October 11 - Dec. 17, was highlighted with many achievements from the following students.

Principals' List: Cameron, Levi, Mackenzie, Daisy, Gaby, Jordan, Hayley, Nathan, Bradley

Honor Roll: Lizzy, Bryson, Garner, William

Most Improved: Nathan and Bradley

Citizenship: Gaby

Student of Nine Weeks: Daisy

Perfect Attendance for this grading period: Garner, Cameron, Mackenzie, Boo, Daisy, Bryson, William, Gaby, Jordan, Hayley, Bradley, Nathan Fight Fogginess With Green Tea!

Met A.R. goals: Cameron, Levi, Gaby, Mackenzie, Bradley, Nathan, Boo, Tucker, Bryson, Hayley, Jordan, Lizzy, Daisy, Garner

Sleep apnea sufferers get less oxygen to their brain at night triggering forgetfulness during the day. To restore your brain skills, sip green tea! It's brimming with powerful polyphenols that counteract the cognitive problems sleep apnea causes, suggests a recent study.

As a result, they snored less, slept more soundly and experienced a surge in daytime energy, reports the American Journal of Respiratory and Critical Care Medicine.

Before bedtime, brush your tongue with a toothbrush while repeating "A-E-I-O-U" 10 times in a row. Next, slide the tip of your tongue back and forth across the roof of your mouth at least 20 times. Sleep apnea sufferers who did these easy tongue workouts reduced the severity of their condition by an impressive 40%!

How to Make Memories Precious

One day, still at least ten years off, my husband and I will be the aptly named, “Empty Nester.”

There are times when I think it won’t be so bad to have the entire house clean for more than an hour every other month.

It will be nice not to have to monitor chores, video game time, and whether or not someone is wearing their underwear.

Trying to figure out algebraic equations with confused children will be a thing of the past, like tying shoelaces a bazillion times a day. I haven’t had to tie shoelaces in about 5 years.

But... I kinda miss tying those shoelaces. I miss packing up little bags of Cheerios for an outing with my little ones. I miss the wet kisses, the sticky hands holding my fingers as we walk. I even miss the toys all over the living room that I had to use a garden rake to clean up. They really ticked me off then.

Still, if I never step on another Lego again, I’m pretty sure it won’t break my heart. If I never have to close another cereal box or put the milk back in the fridge for the hundredth time in a day, I probably will be just fine... won’t I?

Life is full of what-ifs and the moments of life are so fleeting. Why is it so hard to enjoy the imperfect moments while they are happening?

Today, I can laugh about the way the cloth seats in our van made my child wiggle and whine about “having troubles”; but it drove me nuts twelve years ago. The solution, a plastic bag on the seat is even more amusing now because it was such a simple fix.

I was horrified twenty-four years ago when my then three-year old snuck downstairs and opened every present under the Christmas tree before anyone woke up. Now, we consider it a legendary feat.

The moment that you find out your child has stolen his brother’s tooth from under his pillow and placed it under his own pillow, visions of jail time and bail bonds race through your head. Years later, after the tooth-napper has lived many years of honesty and integrity, you think: “That was hilarious!”

Was I supposed to enjoy it when my youngest, at five years old played for a couple hours at a friend’s house, two doors away, only to find that nobody there was home for those two hours? Funny, right? At the time, I was not amused. Neither was my neighbor.

What makes those moments so precious now, when they were so... not precious... back then? Maybe it’s having the knowledge now that these kids are well-adjusted members of society, with no criminal record.

Could I have said that if I had “enjoyed” those moments when they misbehaved instead of blowing a gasket? Perhaps a parent’s anger and intolerance for certain behavior is what eventually allows us to look back and realize that those moments were not only precious, but pivotal as well.

Had we not allowed the child to see our anger, frustration, or disappointment, the memories of those moments could have been quite different.

Enjoying the moments of the present is certainly important for your overall outlook on life. Of course you should enjoy the present. However, I don’t think it is wise to put enjoyment above an honest reaction to bad behavior.

There will be plenty of time to enjoy the more disagreeable antics of your children after you’ve become a successful “empty nester.”

Little Stories About You & Me

By Nancy Allen

Clowning Around

She said her three year old daughter was frightened to the point of hysteria when her sister appeared in costume on Halloween. Even after she removed the mask the child continued to cry and cling to her mother. The child’s aunt was one of her favorite people. They often spent the night together—sometimes more than one day at a time. In fact there were times when the child preferred her aunt to anyone else in the family. So why was the mask a problem?

Clowns for the most part are supposed to be happy and comical. Their intended purpose is to entertain. But let’s face the facts, clowns can be scary. Most of us are not afraid when we see a clown in an expected setting such as a circus, a party, or a parade. But what if a clown showed up at your door on a dark rainy night after midnight? What would cause anxiety in you?

The circus clown usually has a white face and neck, possibly with red ears with red and black features, usually wearing a ruffled collar and a pointed hat—maybe with BIG shoes. He or she plays the part of the ultimate authority figure setting up situations that turn out to be funny.

The Auguste clown has pink, red or tan makeup with the mouth outlined in white. His or her costume is either too small or too large. Bold colors, large prints and suspenders often characterize Auguste costumes. He/she plays the part of an anarchist, a joker or a fool. He takes orders from the white faced clown. Another clown called the Contra-Auguste acts as a mediator between the white faced clown and the Auguste clown.

The Character clown may use anything from glasses, mustaches and beards to freckles, warts and big ears for a costume. Some of the character clowns are hobos, tramps and bums.

Rodeo clowns work to distract the angry bull after the cowboy has been bucked off. I remember seeing a clown once at a rodeo who acted like a Matador. Just when we expected to see a ferocious bull come charging out of the stall, a bulldog with horns looking like a tiny bull came charging toward his victim. The element of surprise worked well and it was funny.

However, many people find clowns disturbing rather than amusing. It is common for children to be afraid of disguised, exaggerated or costumed figures—even Santa Claus. The exaggerated features speak of deception and even as adults we can’t be sure of who is behind the mask.

“In the Space to Care study aimed at improving hospital design for children, researchers from the University of Sheffield polled 250 children regarding their opinions on clowns; all 250 children. . . reported they found clowns frightening.”

The British arts and music festival cancelled its planned clown theme in 2006 after many adult ticketholders contacted the organizers expressing a fear of clowns.

Freud, the famous psychoanalyst, says anxiety exhibits in children when they find themselves with a stranger instead of the person to whom he/she clings.

A mask distorts the identity of even the most familiar person. We shouldn’t be surprised when a child expresses his or her honest feelings.
