

Sweet Sound Of Success

BY GLENDA DYER

Triune resident Jake Lamb, who has had a long career in the audio and video business, is now stirring up things in Eagleville.

About three years ago the Iowa native set up a kitchen in a unit of the former Flamingo Hotel across from the Co-Op to produce candy and other products for his Sweet Heat Farms company.

Although he is still in the audio and video business, Lamb can be found most days "stirring up trouble," as he calls it, at what was once the kitchen of the Flamingo Express drive-through eatery.

Using old-time recipes handed down through his parents, Lamb concocts peanut brittle, pickles, jellies and other food products. He sells his foods over the Internet and through area stores, state parks and at craft shows.

Among his sales outlets are the Eagleville Co-Op, College Grove Grocery, Hatcher Dairy, Henry Horton, Paris Landing and Fall Creek Falls state parks, Miss Daisy's at Grassland Market, and a private label deal at Nolensville Feed Mill.

Now 54, Lamb started his candy-making career at age eight, when he began assisting his father in making peanut brittle.

"At first I was in charge of buttering the pans, and then I worked my way up to washing the pans," he said. "Then I got to stir my first batch."

Later, he started making candy for friends at Christmas time, who told him he should sell it. After he started selling the peanut brittle at craft shows, store owners approached him about selling it in their stores.

"So it has grown and grown," Lamb said.

Over the years, he has expanded his product line by adding other flavors to his brittle, including pecan, cashews, a variety called Totally Nuts that has eight different kinds of nuts except peanuts, and a milk chocolate chunk recipe.

City Election Date Changed To November

By GLENDA DYER

Those expecting an Eagleville city election this April as it has traditionally been held will have to wait until time for this year's presidential election on Nov. 4.

City councilmen voted in May 2006 to change the election date from April to November to coincide with the federal and state general elections in order to save the city money. City elections are held every two years.

The cities of Smyrna and LaVergne also hold their elections in November, but the city of Murfreesboro still holds its election in April.

Three Eagleville council seats are up for election this year, which are those of Vice Mayor Ronnie Hill and Councilmen M.A. Smitty and Terry Zumbro.

Hill said he plans to seek re-election for one more term. Zumbro said he has not made up his mind yet about running for re-election, and Smitty could not be reached for comment on Sunday.

The seats of Mayor Nolan Barham and Councilmen Harold Vincion, David Rigsby and Greg Buchanan will be up for election in November 2010.

Council members' terms are for four years but the terms of the present council members will be extended from May to November because of the election date change.

This year's city of Eagleville election process will begin May 23, which is the first date for prospective candidates to start the qualifying process and to pick up nominating petitions.

The petitions must be filed with the Rutherford County Election Commission Office with the qualifying deadline being at noon on Aug. 21. The petitions are to be signed by the candidate and at least 25 registered voters who are eligible to vote in the election.

Currently there are 362 registered voters in Eagleville, according to the election commission office.

The last day for residents to register to vote in the Nov. 4 city election is Monday, Oct. 6. Early voting will be held from Oct. 15-30.

Early voting will be held at the Rutherford County Election Commission office on the square in Murfreesboro. The election is held at the community center in Eagleville.

"Everyone seems to have a recipe for peanut brittle so I do variations on a theme," he said.

He also makes a bread and butter pickle using a century-old recipe handed down through his mother. Another product he makes is hot chocolate pepper jelly, using a variety of green peppers called "chocolate" and jalapenos and his homemade Habanero sauce.

Lamb's jellies include blueberry and blackberry plus a Concord grape jelly that has cherry pieces floating in it. It is called "Floating Cherry, Hidden Grape," a tribute to the famous martial arts film. His "Merry Tri-Berry" jelly is made with raspberries, blackberries and blueberries.

He grows as much of the vegetables and berries for his foods as he has time to do and buys other produce from farmer's markets, trying to use as much Tennessee produce as possible.

Lamb said he is now having difficulty in keeping up with the demand for his products, and he is looking at the next level of production. An option would be using an FDA-approved kitchen service that would have employees available to cook under his supervision.

"Hopefully, they will be opening up a Tennessee kitchen for small guys like me sometime in the early summer," he said, noting that the kitchens can cook in "monster batches."

In addition to his busy food business schedule, Lamb, who has a degree in radio, television and film from the University of Georgia, also does voice overs, makes DVD's and other related work. Types of recordings he does include commercials, documentaries, audio books, business presentations and movie and game trailers. He does character voices in areas such as cartoons, films, video games and voice systems.

Nashville is a good place to do his audio work because the city has some of the best recording studios in the industry, he said.

Lamb's father was with the Red Cross so he has lived in many states and abroad, but he stills speaks with mostly a Midwestern accent. He can also speak German, having lived in that country for five years.

He and his wife, Eva, who is now vice president of sales for Acorn Video in Nashville, came to Tennessee about 15 years ago with his job. They were driving out in the countryside one day and found an older home with a white picket fence on about eight acres in Triune.

"We bought it within 15 minutes," he said. "Compared to the other cities I've lived in, Nashville is still clean and green and safe."

He and Eva have no children but do have four dogs and three cats.

"I'm so much of a kid at heart, I don't think I could ever raise children," Lamb said. "Candy is hard to make but raising children is far too grown up for me."

Eva helps him at the craft shows but doesn't have time to help with the candy making because of her job.

"We call her the bread winner, and I occasionally get to put butter on the bread," he said.

Apartment Structure Allowed To Use Existing Septic System

BY GLENDA DYER

Recent discussions with the deputy director of the Tennessee Department of Environment and Conservation ground water protection (GWP) division and an agency spokesman confirm that from GWP's viewpoint Eagleville Councilman M.A. Smitty can connect his apartment complex under construction to his existing home septic system.

This is the case, not because GWP has regulations allowing such a connection, but rather that Smitty's proposal to make such a connection falls outside of GWP's authority.

"Mr. Smitty has not approached us with respect to applying for a permit to support a new structure," Britton Dotson, GWP's deputy director, said. "What he has done is proposed to build a structure and use an existing septic system, which steps away for what our regulatory authority encompasses."

GWP has the authority through statute to approve the division of property and the installation of septic systems, TDEC spokesman Tammy Heise said.

"The division, however, does not have the authority to deny a property owner the right to use an existing system located on his or her property, regardless of the existing or proposed structure it will serve," Heise said.

GWP deals with applications for new septic systems and with failed existing septic systems. The division also acquires technical information from tests and observations which can be used by local authorities to make decisions on issuing building permits and utilization of existing systems.

To date, a soil scientist's study determined that Smitty's property has no soil sufficient to support a septic system modification or repair nor a new septic system.

Also, an environmental specialist noted in a field activity report that Smitty's existing home system appears inadequate to support a five-bedroom house as described by Smitty.

A dye test, however, done over a week's period showed no evidence of dye in a creek adjacent to Smitty's property.

From GWP's viewpoint, Smitty can utilize his home septic system for his new apartment complex because the dye testing did not indicate a system failure.

Any regulation of this activity or any designation of how many apartments can be connected to the system would be the responsibility of local authorities, who can rely on the technical information provided by GWP.

According to Heise, GWP cannot determine whether or not an existing system is adequate to handle a specific capacity only that a functioning septic tank and field lines are in place.

"In Mr. Smitty's case, GWP has confirmed that a functioning septic system is located on the property," Heise said. "We will continue to monitor Mr. Smitty's property and will take appropriate action if his septic system should fail."

Letter to the editor

To the Editor:

In reference to the letters/comments regarding the new city recorder position. I applied for the position. I did not get the position. That is fine; however, I never received a letter, phone call, or e-mail that my letter and resume had been received. I have not received a letter thanking me for applying for the position or notifying me that the position has been filled. These are common 'good' business practices which seem to have been overlooked by our city administration.

On a lighter note – I enjoy the paper so much. I pass it along to my mother-in-law, Evelyn Maxwell Writesman, in Nashville and she loves to see the pictures and articles of folks she knew as a child growing up in Rockvale. Thank you for such a great tool to stay in touch w/our corner of Rutherford county (and surrounding areas)!

Local Resident Worked For Menendez

BY GLENDA DYER

About 20 years ago Triune resident Jake Lamb was vice president of sales for a major Los Angeles video distribution company run by Jose Menendez who was murdered by his sons Lyle and Erick.

Now Lamb is selling for his own company, Sweet Heat Farms, which is based in Eagleville. He is also still involved in the audio and video field.

The Iowa native entered the video field after he graduated from the University of Georgia. He worked his way up to be vice president of sales for the video distribution company run by Menendez, which was owned by Carolco that got its start making the Rambo films.

Menendez was CEO of the video company and was Lamb's boss's boss. Lamb worked for the company about a year and left about a month before the brothers brutally shot not only Menendez but their mother too.

The murders occurred on Aug. 20, 1989, in the den of the family's Beverly Hills home while the parents watched television. The brothers denied having anything to do with their parents' death but in December 1992, after about three years of lavish spending, they were indicted in the murders.

The defense argued that the brothers were driven to murder by a lifetime of abuse from their parents, including sexual abuse from the father Jose Menendez. In part because of the brothers' past criminal records, they were eventually convicted of two counts of first degree murder and were sentenced to life in prison without the possibility of parole.

According to media reports, Jose was not well-liked by his coworkers and many of his fellow workers believed the initial reports that his death was a mob hit.

Lamb agreed with that assessment, saying Menendez was a "horrible guy" who was especially harsh on his employees.

He remembered that Menendez held business meetings once a month. At those "business reviews," he would keep the employees, who were scheduled to give their reports, sometimes waiting needlessly for hours at a time before it was their time for the "grilling."

"He had an accounting background, so if you weren't exactly right to the penny, even though they were estimates, he would just destroy you," Lamb said. "And to keep you on the edge of your seat, he would lower the thermostat to 50 degrees, insult your family and education, and order in lunch for everyone except the individual giving the status report."

Lamb remembers Menendez's wife, Louise, as "a sweet woman who was caught in the crossfire."

He met Lyle and Erick at company functions and at parties at Jose's house. He described the brothers as "rich kids with an attitude."

The family had to keep moving into new homes about every three to four months because the brothers kept breaking into neighbors' houses and stealing stuff, Lamb said.

One of the strangest and perhaps most troubling instances that he remembers occurred when he and his boss and others were at a staff meeting.

"Jose asked me a question which in order to answer it correctly I would have to had implicated my boss, so I said nothing," Lamb said. "So Jose looked at me and said, 'Well, we have a dead man working for us now.'"

Two days later, Lamb got another job offer in Washington D.C., which he immediately took.

"Just one short month later, Jose Menendez was the dead man," he said.

Menendez's murder came as no surprise to Lamb.

"It wasn't like who could have done this," he said. "There was a long list of suspects."

He believes the brothers received the punishment they deserved, saying the slayings were a heinous crime, but he also believes there is some merit to their allegations of abuse.

"They always said the kids killed him for the money, but they wouldn't have killed him the way they did if there weren't more to the story," Lamb said.

"If you just want to kill somebody, you cut the brake lines, but to make it look like a gangland execution by blasting him eight times with a shotgun at point blank range and then going outside to reload...well that's a lot of suppressed anger," he said. "The shotgun wasn't just a weapon, but an erasure as well."

Sometime later, Lamb bought a copy of "People" magazine, which had a Menendez family portrait on the front page.

"I was reading it and someone asked, 'Wasn't that a horrible thing that happened to that guy?'" he said. "I thought to myself, 'Buddy. you don't know the half of it.'"

Rutherford County School Students Enroll In Pilot Program For Online High School Courses

More than 60 Rutherford County students have signed up for a new program that Rutherford County Schools is participating in that allows students to complete high school courses online.

The program, called e4TN, is being conducted on a pilot basis by the Tennessee Department of Education, which may continue the program in future years if it proves worthwhile. The program allows students to take high schools completely online, and students can work at home, during school and after school to complete the required course work.

Rutherford County Schools will begin participating in the program the second semester of the 2007-2008. Classes were scheduled to begin Jan. 10, 2008 although orientation will be held at RCS high schools next week.

A total of 62 Rutherford County students have signed up for the program and will be working toward about 48 hours of course credit. The program mainly targets students who are in need of courses to graduate on time or advanced students who need to get lower level classes out of the way so they can proceed to more advanced classes during high school. RCS has a mixture of at-risk, gifted, resource, semi-homebound and regular education students in the program.

A facilitator at each participating school (the facilitator is typically the newly created graduation coach position) works with the students enrolled in the program to help keep them on track. However, the facilitators are not the teachers. Each course is taught by a certified, highly qualified teacher completely online.

Through the Years with the Frost Brothers

The four Frost Brothers, Carl, Alvin, Don and John, were all graduates of Eagleville School. They retired from gospel music one year ago and Don, who still has a national TV show, "Music City Gospel Showcase", put together several hours of video footage that goes back 40 years. The first order sold out in two days.

More copies are on order and you can own a piece of history by ordering a copy.

- One of the first Gospel Quartets to share the stage with the top Country groups of their era.
- The first white Gospel group to appear on stage in Chicago with the top Black groups in the 1960s
- A Grammy nomination on their first album
- Introduced "He is my Everything", which was a huge hit for the Brothers and soon the song was recorded many times, eventually by Elvis Presley
- They had two number one Christian Country releases in the same year. "Step on Out" and "Angel Wings".
- This same year they were named "Quartet of the Year" by the same Organization.

The Frost Brothers are proud to offer their DVD which captures some of the Brothers' appearances over the last 40 years.

Over the years, Eagleville has proven worthy of its name, adopted August 16, 1836. As this community developed, an application was filed for a post office under the name Manchester in 1832. This application was rejected because there was already a Manchester Tennessee and a new name was needed. About this same time, an unusually large eagle was killed on the hill located on the south end of town. As history records, Eagleville received it's official name from that incident.

The Eagle is known as one of the largest and most powerful birds in the world. At close range, they look fierce but proud and have long been the symbol of freedom and power. As we all know, Eagleville isn't one of the largest communities, but as the eagle, it has always been a community of strength and pride. Damage and destruction by fire has been one of the main challenges of this small Rutherford County community over the years, especially as a portion of the downtown main street area had eight known buildings completely destroyed by fire from 1952 to 1982. (See map)

FOUR BUILDINGS BURN TO THE GROUND – 1952

In the early morning of June 11, 1952 a devastating fire raged in downtown Eagleville. The fire, discovered by an unidentified truck driver, aroused Junior Redmon who's residence was the first house south of the Las Fiesta Restaurant and he alerted the townspeople. In total four buildings were destroyed but with the efforts of firemen from neighboring communities, several other buildings were saved. Fire engines from Murfreesboro, Shelbyville, Chapel Hill, Nashville and Sewart Air Force Base in Smyrna came to Eagleville to help in extinguishing the flames. Eagleville itself, incorporated about two years earlier, had no fire department. Water was also hauled in from surrounding communities to fight the blaze. Burned to the ground were a poolroom, where the fire started, and a café, both owned by Herbert Phillips, W. T. Lowe and Son Hardware-Appliance Store

Downtown Eagleville prior to 1952. Large white building is the McRae Hotel. The defined roads are Hwy 99 and Allisona Road.

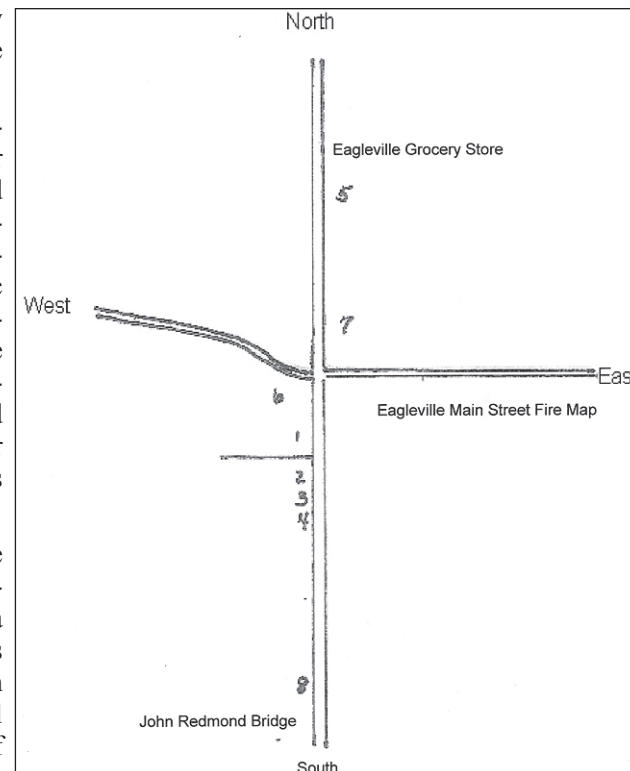

A Step Back in Time

By Bobbie Sue Shelton-Lonas

and Russell Puckett's Grocery Store, which also housed the Eagleville Post Office.

Brisk, shifting winds threatened to carry the blaze to other businesses across the street and into the residential section before it was brought under control about 4:30 a.m. Electric service in the town was disrupted during the fire, hindering the efforts to stop the flames. Traffic through Eagleville returned to normal at mid-morning after being blocked by fallen wires and fire-fighting equipment.

The café and poolroom were demolished with all furnishings. Only a deep freeze and a television set were among items of major importance saved from the hardware store. Russell Puckett reported that about half of his merchandise and everything from the post office was saved from the fire. Damage from this early Wednesday morning fire was estimated at $100,000.

FIRE DESTROYS RESTAURANT AT EAGLEVILLE – 1960

Again, June 11, 1960, as in 1952 several businesses were threatened by fire when the Eagle Nest Café, located on the north end of Eagleville, burned. This building also housed an abandoned hotel, located above the restaurant. Cause of the fire was not determined but was believed to have started in the upper level of the building. An adjoining skating rink and Puckett's Grocery Store were saved, but was damaged by smoke and water. Oscar Johns owned the 14-year-old building, built by L. B. Parker, and Junior and Nina Redmon operated the restaurant.

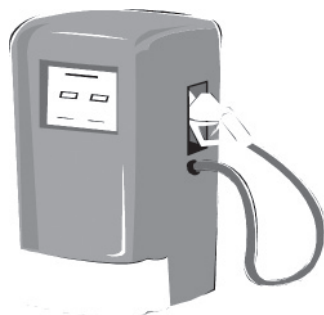

Firemen from Murfreesboro, College Grove, Chapel Hill and Sewart Air Force Base answered the call to help the Eagleville volunteer fire department prevent what could have been another major disaster to Eagleville.

MCRAE HOTEL BURNS - 1963

On November 22, 1963 the McRae Home and Hotel burned to the ground. Located at the corner of Allisona Road and Main Street, this beautiful two-story house was built prior to 1892. Owned by Chesley Williams at the time of his death, it passed through several ownerships before Mr. and Mrs. Pleasant Samuel McRae purchased it in 1910. The McRae Family made their home here as well as rented rooms to hotel quests. At the time of the fire, a grand daughter of the McRae's, Imogene Sullivan Schatz, owned the home and the only occupant living in the home was Charlie McRae, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. S. McRae. He was not injured in the fire that was discovered by a passing motorist.

MARSHALL'S GROCERY -1971

Another old building in Eagleville was consumed by fire, May 3, 1971. Marshall's Grocery, a two story building, located at the present site of Eagleville Drug Center was owned and operated by Howard and Helen Marshall. In 1935, G. V. Arnold purchased this property from W. F. Carson and operated a drug store - ice cream shop. In November 1944 the store and property sold to Malcolm "Pat" Bellenfant and in October 1945 the Marshall's purchased it. In addition to a grocery store, the building previously housed a gift shop, operated by the Marshall's and a barbershop operated several years by Bud Walker, who died in 1964. Arthur Barnes lived in the upstairs living area of the store building several years until his death in 1969. He sold newspapers from the entrance to his living quarters on the north end of the building.

TWO-APARTMENT FIRE -1982

A two-family residence located just north of the John Redmond Bridge burned June 14, 1982. This rental property was owned by Jimmy and Ellie Wilkinson.

One of the tenants, Robert Frost age 81, was credited with saving the life of the baby of the other apartment dweller. It was reported Mr. Frost, confined in a wheelchair, entered the adjoining apartment, which was on fire, and was able to get the child and take it to safety on the front porch. The mother left the building to report the fire. The child and Mr. Frost was taken to the hospital, where they recovered from second and third degree burns. Several appreciation awards were given to Mr. Frost for his act of bravery. It was reported that President Reagan telephoned Frost from the White House, but Frost was unable to talk with him because of receiving treatment at the time.

The large house with a wrap-around front and side porch had previously been owned by the Corlett Family in the late 1800's and later the Shelton family. Walter J. Shelton, who died in 1951, was an Eagleville mail carrier from 1910 till 1943.

In addition to the above Main Street fires, many family dwellings and other important buildings in the Eagleville area have also been destroyed.

Union Soldiers burned the Harpeth Baptist Church, located about 1-½ miles north of Eagleville during the Civil War as it was being used as a hospital. The church was rebuilt in about 1866 at a new location in Eagleville and a new name, Eagleville Missionary Baptist Church.

Eagleville has had three school fires, one in early 1890, another one in 1923 that burned the Eagleville School building that was built in 1915 and in June 1994 a large portion of the school destroyed again.

The One Gallus Fox Camp on the Chapel Hill Road burned in February 1971. This was the headquarters of foxhunts, turkey shoots and many community activities.

The Rocky Glade Cumberland Presbyterian Church burned on Good Friday, 1995. The church was re-built in the summer of 1995 and by Thanksgiving, services were held in the new building.

With all the above destruction and much more not included in this article, Eagleville, strong as its name implies, survives.

Eagleville Homecoming

BY REBECCA GILLER

Basketball homecoming was a major success for the 07-08 season. Having only two days to carry out activities to get everyone pumped for the big game was a challenge but we did it.

During a pep rally on Friday, the Student Council came up with games and activities for all to participate in. These events included a school colors day, dodge ball tournament, the panty hose game, pass the ball, Keepin' it Fresh, scavenger hunt and a class banner competition. With the junior class winning the banner contest with "Control the Commanders", they went on to win the entire week.

The homecoming court consisted of Jordan Goins and Paul Guadalupe for freshman attendant and escort. Shelbi Sweeney and Nick Moore for the sophomore class attendant and escort. Kayla Pugh and Jacob Anderson represented the junior class. The candidates for the king were James Blackwell, Michael Frost, and Jonathon Maxwell. The candidates for the queen were Tiffany Carlton, Brittany Jordan, and Natalie Prater.

Congratulations to James Blackwell and Brittany Jordan being named Eagleville High School basketball homecoming king and queen.

Little Stories About You & Me

By Nancy Allen

The Suspicious Grasshopper

by Cliff Allen

A tribute to my son,
in his own words:

Long ago . . . In old Stonehaven, when I was just a boy. . .

a valuable lesson was taught to me by an unlikely teacher. In those days Stonehaven was very different than it is now; hills, and water where the void is now—much laughter. Now it is a dry and broken land. . . inhabited by evil ones...but that is a story for another night.

Stonehaven is the village of my birth. When I was a very young boy . . . my mother, Hilda, would wake me early in the morning to begin my chores and studies. In my sixth year, as the seasons began to change from Fall to Winter, I remember awaking one morning and looking out the window. My bed was closest to the fireplace, and the window by my bed looked out past the stone chimney to the sea. I could sit for hours and gaze out at the water—something so intriguing about an endless horizon.

I was sitting mesmerized, watching the fog lift away when a small bit of motion on the chimney drew my attention. Hidden against the old gray stone of the chimney was the largest grasshopper I had seen in all my six years! As any young boy...I was fascinated by insects...I rushed outside to get a closer look, getting very close...interested in every shiny, spiky, armored detail. The grasshopper waved his antennae at me, and then...to my surprise...he spoke!

"Fine weather we're havin'...wouldn't ya say!?"

I was more than a little surprised...but only as a young child is...who doesn't know that magic is out of the ordinary.

"Yes, Mister Hopper! But momma says Winter is coming soon."

"Winter? Hmmm! What be this Winter?"

"It gets very cold, and all the leaves fall from the trees."

"It was cooler than normal last night..."

but I have found this warm place. I am the oldest grasshopper in the meadow...I have never seen this thing called Winter."

"It is coming...It will get very cold. You should come inside with me so you will be safe," I said.

"Nonsense! You are trying to trap me with an old wives' tale! One step closer and I will hop away!"

So I left the grasshopper alone. But each morning I went out to talk to him...to try to convince him to come inside, to no avail. Every night...it grew a little colder...until finally one morning I was awoken by my very excited mother, "Aeric! Wake up! It's snowing!" I jumped up and wiped the condensation from the window by my bed. The familiar view was completely changed...the long horizon across the sea was gone, replaced by large feathery snowflakes. Mister Harper!

I ran out to the chimney...still in my bare feet, and nightshirt...my mother running screaming behind me. I looked to the spot where Mister Hopper had clung for weeks...he was gone. I knelt and brushed some snow away...and there he was, still and lifeless. My mother quieted when she saw the small creature...and that I had tears in my eyes.

"He wouldn't come inside mama!"

"What do you mean Aeric?"

"He didn't believe in Winter...and thought he'd be safe on the chimney."

Hilda looked at her son quietly for a moment...worrying that he was touched in the head...but decided that he just had a very vivid imagination.

"Son...some creatures never prepare for the cold. But the cold always comes eventually."

We buried Mister Hopper...and I have remembered his lesson to this day. "The cold wind eventually blows on us all."

Cliff Allen died July 25th 2007.

Laura On Life

By Laura Snyder

Scheduling A Shower

The trouble with having a large family is getting everyone clean. I've long ago given up on keeping them clean, but a daily bath is definitely in order for the youngest ones in my family.

I try to give my younger children a bath at night. But unless I stretch bath time out for three or four hours, considering how long it takes for the hot water heater to recover, they all can't take one on the same night.

When they were babies, I could get away with putting them all in the tub together. Even if they would tolerate that now, which they most emphatically would not, my bathroom would quickly deteriorate under those circumstances. They're much more...active...now.

I've tried using the same bath water for all of them. My daughter loves very hot baths and she is usually the cleanest of them, so she would go first. After that, however, I had trouble convincing my germophobic son that the water was cleaner than he was. If I couldn't get him in the tub after my daughter, there was no way I'd get him in there after my six-year old. That one attracts dirt like a Swiffer. Honestly, I've never seen him roll around in a pile of loose dirt, but he always looks as though he has.

Dirt imbeds itself under his fingernails, behind his ears and on any part of his body that has been exposed to whatever he spilled on himself that day. There are many times that I have considered hosing him down before he came in the house.

So, anyway, the bath water is definitely unrecyclable after he's been in it and there is no hot water left for a shower.

We've finally decided on a staggered bath/shower schedule for the older two and an on-demand schedule for the youngest.

Getting a hot shower for myself from day to day is a crap-shoot. It's not because of a shortage of showers – we have three of them in our house – it's the shortage of hot water. What good is having three showers if we can't use them all at once?

The adults in my family include my nineteen-year old son when he is home from college. We all need to take a shower in the morning. If we take one at night, it results in moderate to severe bed-head which no amount of gel, mousse, or other industrial-strength hair care product can make right.

Since I am the only woman fighting for the shower in the morning, I figured the easiest way to solve the issue was for the men to shave themselves bald and shower at night. However, they were not inclined to be reasonable.

As a result of this need for a hot shower in the morning, we are all motivated to rise and shine much earlier than any sane person. However, regardless of my diligence where rising and shining is concerned, sometimes I am still the last person to take a shower.

Thinking that I've waited long enough for the hot water to recover, I'll get in the shower, lather up, and only then discover that...I was wrong.

No matter how much I adjust the cold water to allow more warm water, I know that I'm eventually going to be freezing my butt off under a stream of frigid, arctic water. At that moment, my mindset changes very quickly from "How long can I stay in this shower?" to "How fast can I get out?"

Some people say that taking a cold shower is "exhilarating". Those are the same people that jog 20 miles every morning, climb Mt. Everest for fun, and jump out of airplanes with nothing but a backpack with a large handkerchief inside.

"OLD SHOES BECOME UNBEARABLE"

By Cornelia Elmore

Words Manipulate!

In America, we are privileged to vote. We elect mayors, governors and the president of our nation. Once elected, the words that are published and spoken by these individuals are often unacceptable to the voters who elected them.

Massive layoffs in our economy cause older workers to compete in a job market where their skills are obsolete. A recent letter to the editor of a local newspaper voiced strong objections to unkind and unsympathetic comments by an elected official who blames these elder workers (who must be retrained to enter the workforce) for our economic problems. Incredible!

Have you ever tried to reach your local elected officials by telephone? These people "talk" about how they serve the citizens but when you meet them eye-to-eye they are nervous as a stray cat! Why do many elected officials instantly become so arrogant? In the next election, we should vote these parasites out of office! I am not one to cast stones, but frankly, we voters must start speaking out.

Although we are the smallest municipality in Rutherford County, or perhaps because of that, we are not ordinary people. We take pride in our community's award winning school located in a community that is nearly perfect for raising children. We fully realize that we are a blessed and fortunate people.

All religions instruct us to live with compassion for the less fortunate. Do we live a life of stress and frustration because we have forgotten how to be thankful for all our blessings?

Do we ignore our elderly and shut-ins, failing to realize that only our visits can cure their hours of endless loneliness? Do we really, really try to be nice and loving or do we ignore the true feelings of others here in our community?

Most people who live in rural communities like ours have to drive many miles to buy gasoline, farm supplies, hardware and groceries. We also have banking and medical services available.

Still, we cannot bury our heads and pretend that there are no problems in our wonderful little world. If elected officials cannot, will not or do not take care of government responsibilities as they have promised that they will do, it is always appropriate for the citizenry to take action.

I am thankful for the Eagleville Times. The reporting is always factual and responsibly reminds us when things are going well and when our local officials are failing us. I am sure that producing a small town newspaper is a very rewarding job with very little pay. What other town this size do you know that has such a wonderful newspaper?

It is this freedom of the press that informs us when our rights as citizens are being violated and ignored. When the citizens remain silent, corruption flourishes. Silence can be our doom.

KIDDIE CORRAL

BY ANGELA WOODALL

Cherry Tidbits

- In the U.S., most sweet cherries for fresh use are grown in California and Washington.
- Most sour or tart cherries are grown in four states bordering the Great Lakes in Michigan, New York, Pennsylvania, and Wisconsin.
- Traverse City, Michigan is the self-proclaimed Cherry Capitol of the World. They claim to make the world's largest cherry pie!
- Cherries have a very short fruiting season, which is in June in America.
- Cherries also have beautiful flowers known as cherry blossoms and they are lovely in the spring.

Cherry Lollipops

Prep Time: 8 minutes

INGREDIENTS:

- ¾ cup butter
- ¾ cup granulated sugar
- ½ cup light corn syrup
- 1 box (3 oz.) cherry Jell-O
- Non-stick cooking spray
- 20 lollipop sticks
- Tablespoon measuring spoon (metal)
- Metal spatula
- Candy thermometer
- Plastic wrap

Butter two cookies sheets. Arrange half of the lollipop sticks on each and set aside. In a small saucepan over low heat, stir butter, sugar and corn syrup together until sugar has dissolved. Slowly bring to a bowl, stirring frequently. Insert a Candy thermometer into syrup and continue cooking until temperature registers 275 degree F. Stir in gelatin until smooth. Remove from heat. CAREFUL! Sugar is very hot and can burn young and older hands. Using a metal tablespoon and working quickly, drop heaping spoonfuls of lollipop syrup onto the end of each lollipop stick. Flatten into a circle shape with metal spatula sprayed with cooking spray. Cool completely. Wrap each sucker in plastic wrap and store in an airtight container.

Merry Cherries

Cherry Tree Craft

Materials Needed:

- Large piece of paper
- Crayons or markers
- Red paint

On a large piece of paper, trace your hand and forearm all the way up to your elbow. Make sure your fingers are spread apart. The tracing of your forearm will be the tree trunk and your fingers will be the branches. Color it in with brown crayons. Make leaves on your tree. Pour a little red paint on a paper plate, dip your finger in it, on the tree branches. You now have a tree full of "cherries".

Helpful Hints

Don't want to spend a lot time on oven cleaning? Place ammonia (about 1 cup) in an aluminum pie pan and place it in the oven overnight. In the morning, simply remove the pan and wipe the oven clean with a damp sponge. If you do this often (about once a month) you won't have to spend money on harmful chemicals to do the job.

To keep lint and dust off glass top tables, wash them in a solution of warm water and fabric softener. Add one tablespoon of liquid fabric softener to one quart of warm water. The fabric softener will clean the glass inexpensively and will help keep lint from gathering on the glass. Also great for computer screens and TV's.

When bread is baking, a small oven safe dish of water in the oven will help to keep the crust from getting too hard.

Hidden Treasures - Tennessee State Fairgrounds Flea Market

Thousands of curious customers head to the Nashville fairgrounds on the fourth weekend of every month to attend the Tennessee State Fairgrounds Flea Market. Except for the month of December, when it's held on the third weekend. The two-day event is considered to be among the top ten flea markets in the country. Dealers and vendors from 30 states offer their wares to the buying public. Some shoppers travel hundreds of miles, often by busloads, to pursue the bargains and hard-to-find items offered for sale.

You'll find many items at the flea market. You'll find everything from gifts, antiques, collectibles, jewelry, arts and crafts, tools, house wares, handmade clothing, and hundreds of thousands of other items each month. The fairgrounds claim that they have approximately 1,600 vendors at their market.

While admission is always free, you will probably have to have about three bucks to park for the day. Overnight RV parking will cost you $35.00 per night. You must arrive early to get the best deals and avoid the midday rush of bargain hunting. It is a good idea to contact the fairgrounds for special dates or changes due to holidays. The prices are relatively reasonable plus you can support local artisans and craft makers. Here are some suggestions that might assist you with your flea market endeavors.

What to Wear and Bring:

- Comfortable clothes and bring a pair of gloves

- Limited jewelry
- A money belt or fanny pack to keep cash and keys safe. It allows you to free up your hands.
- Cash (personal checks and credit cards are sometimes not accepted)
- Lunch and light snacks if desirable
- Small flashlight
- Magnifying glass
- Tape measure

Many people like to haggle or "bargain" at the flea markets. You may offer less than you are willing to pay. Any amount shows you are interested, but the amount must be reasonable and fair. You may want to ask the dealer, "Is this your best price?" Neither the buyer nor the seller should be embarrassed, and 75 percent of the time, you can get a better buy. "Firm" on the ticket means the dealer must have that amount. Something else to remember is that multi-item purchases may bring a better price for the entire lot than individual pieces. Attending the flea market is like attending one LARGE yard sale. Its great fun for all! Here are some dates for the upcoming year and I hope you find many treasures. Happy Hunting!
