Thomas Maupin Receives The Folklife Heritage Award

By Bobbie Sue Shelton-Lonas

This article was published in the May issue but due to bad photo quality in the May issue, Eagleville Times decided to rerun the article to honor Mr. Maupin.

On April 12, 2011 Thomas Maupin was honored by Governor Bill Haslam and First Lady Crissy Haslam in a special ceremony produced by the Tennessee Arts Commission. Held in the Conservation Hall of the Governor's Residence, Thomas, who was accompanied by his family, received the Folklife Heritage Award. This award recognizes folk artists or organizations that have made outstanding contributions to artistic tradition. The award is intended to honor long-term achievements within art forms that are rooted in the traditional culture of Tennessee.

"Culture and art help to form our state both in its beauty and heritage," Governor Haslam said. "We congratulate all the winners for the legacies of art they have created for each one of us to enjoy. "The eight 2011 recipients represent excellence and the rich diversity that defines the state's cultural life," says Rich Boyd, executive director of the Tennessee Arts Commission.

The Folklife Heritage Award recognizes folk artists or organizations that have made outstanding contributions to artistic tradition. Thomas Maupin, of Murfreesboro, is the most celebrated traditional Tennessee dancer of his generation. While he owes his abilities to a strong family dance heritage and to considerable natural talent, Maupin's notoriety also reflects years of dedication and a sheer love for adding his rhythmic footwork to the sounds of old-time string music. He was born into an Eagleville farm family where everybody, including his barefoot grandmother, danced for enjoyment. It was traditional buck dancing or flatfoot dancing; a southern folk form evolved out of Scotch-Irish step-dancing and African juba rhythms. Maupin polished his steps as a young man, when community square dances were still fairly common. As square dancers perform choreographed group figures, buck dance steps afford an outlet for expression of individual styles. Thomas mastered basic traditional steps with his own flare and, an innovator from the beginning, ventured beyond to incorporate elements from tap dance as well. As a young husband and father, Maupin for some time prioritized work and family over dancing. Then in the 1970s, as new fiddle contests and other traditional music festivals gained popularity, he found time and opportunities to dance in public again. Most often it was in traditional dance contests, where for 25 years, he was extremely competitive, winning over 60 championships at surrounding regional and state competitions. Lately Maupin has devoted more time to workshops, exhibition performances, and mentoring younger dancers. Most recently, he's developed a special partnership with his grandson Daniel Rothwell, who fine old-time banjo-playing provides a perfect complement to showcase his talent and dance heritage. (The above information appeared in the Governor's Art Awards Official Program.)

One of the highlights of the event for Thomas was dancing for Governor and Mrs. Haslam and other distinguished guest. Thomas was accompanied by his grandson and son-in-law Daniel and Danny Rothwell.

The other recipients of the Folklife Heritage Awards were The Blues Foundation of Memphis, an organization that serves as a hub for the worldwide passion for Blues music; and Charles Towler of Cleveland, one of the most highly-respected figures in the world of southern gospel convention singing.

Arts Leadership Awards was presented to Patrick W. Halloran, III of Memphis, and the W.O. Smith Nashville Community Music School. Recipients in this category may come from arts organizations, business, educators, patrons, arts administrators, corporations, or volunteers who have demonstrated significant support or participation in activities which foster excellence in, appreciation of, or access to the arts throughout the state.

Halloran is a visionary leader who played a key role in the preservation of the Orpheum Theatre, and positioned the theater as an economic development partner with downtown Memphis — a vibrant cultural treasure. Once a derelict building, the Orpheum Theatre now thrives as a world-class performing arts facility.

Since its inception in 1984, the W.O. Smith Nashville Community Music School has made affordable, quality music instruction available to children from low-income families. The nationally acclaimed after-school program continues to transform lives through music, and has changed the cultural and artistic fabric of Middle Tennessee's young people.

The Distinguished Artist Award recognizes artists of exceptional talent and creativity in any discipline, who over the course of a career, have contributed to the arts and have helped guide and influence directions, trends, and aesthetic practices on a state or national level.

Three outstanding Tennessee artists were honored with the Distinguished Artist Award. They are: Estelle Condra of Nashville, a professional actor, inspiring storyteller, teacher, and writer who has been legally blind since childhood; Johnny Maddox of Gallatin, one of the most highly regarded Ragtime pianist of the last 60 years who has made hundreds of recordings and sold more than 11 million records; and Dolph Smith of Ripley, a highly creative and innovative artist who has inspired thousands of students and a large number of working artists across the region.

These recipients of the 2011 Governor's Arts Awards will join individuals and organizations that have been recognized over the past 41 years.

A Message From Your Mayor

EAGLES FLY HIGH
Once again Eagleville School is producing outstanding student athletics.

What about the baseball team going to the state tournament , for the second year in a row. These young men are excelling on the diamond to make us all proud .

Most track and field athletics compete in one event, however high school junior Becca Browning will compete in the pentathlon; FIVE EVENTS in one day. I am tired just thinking about what she will be doing !

As I always ask support our school and students every chance you get, these young men and women will be “us” one day, parents, teachers, police officers, leaders of our state and community.

Mrs. Holton, the administration and the entire staff are to be commended on the job they do giving guidance to the next generation. THANK YOU.

Some 15 or so years ago it was determined The City of Eagleville was in need for a public sewer system. Today the need is greater than ever. The city has been trying to complete a household survey for a grant (free money). Grants are not paid back, loans are repaid.

I understand many of us do not want to give personal information, and this is understandable, however the information is sent to Nashville. No one knows or cares what the survey includes. No one in Eagleville will ever see or know what is in these surveys. I have heard some people say they did not need a sewer, some may be correct, however from an earlier study, a large percentage of household septic tanks had some type failure. I have heard people say a sewer would not personally help them. I tend to disagree with that statement. It would help all of us. Hopefully we could have more business’s that would bring in more tax dollars and be more convenient to shop in Eagleville. The biggest advantage will be, Eagleville will be a cleaner and healthier place to live, whether you want to admit it or not, we the citizens of Eagleville are contaminating Harpeth River and every other stream in Eagleville. This is truth, not fiction. If we do not solve our problem, one day the state or another group will solve the problem for us and we will not have any input what so ever. I know we are all scared of change and I am also , however we can control our future and change. The world around us changes everyday. So in turn we can plan change or we can wait until it hits us in the face. We can act or wait to re-act. When you act upon an issue it is far easier and less stressful than re-acting to a situation that you have no control over.

I hope and think we are all proud of our school. Our school is in dire need of an upgrade to their sewer plant and needs to be replaced. The school would be part of the public sewer system, this will help to assure the stability and future of our school. So yes a public sewer system will help everyone personally.

If you did receive a survey please fill it out, if you have misplace it, call city hall at 274-6992 and we will get you a replacement. It is important for the future of our city. Thank you.

As always, shop locally to support our local merchants and please support our school.

If I can be assistance, call my personal cell number 849-6509.

Eagleville Police Department Police Chief George Barrett

One Year Later

As of May 17th, 2011 the Eagleville Police Department has been active for one year. In this past year I have helped the department grow both professionally and in size. When I first took this job I had an idea what I was in for but I had no clue what I would encounter. As with all law enforcement agencies, most citizens approve but then you have those who do not want a police department around. So I sit back and ask myself, “Why wouldn’t these people want police protection?” This can be answered in many ways.

First, some people don’t like authority. Well, unfortunately, in today’s society someone has to do the job we do. If we don’t, then people don’t feel safe. Whether it’s traffic enforcement or being vigilant on patrol of neighborhoods, the police have a very difficult job. Most of you do not and may never see what we actually accomplish. Just being visible does a great deal but that’s not all. We have to actually enforce the laws of this city, county, and country. We may not like having to do it, just as much as those that do not like us doing it, but it must be done. Eagleville may be small but the people of this city deserve the same protection as those in Murfreesboro, Smyrna, and Lavergne.

I see Eagleville growing into a very beautiful and prospering city. We just need more people to be proud of their city and help it rather than hold it back. Another reason may be memories of the way things use to be, or they themselves may be on the wrong side of the law. Despite the reason, we have a police department. We are here to help and protect the citizens and visitors of our great city.

In the past year, we have made the streets safer by reducing the number of traffic crashes, made the neighborhoods safer by apprehending and prosecuting those who break in and steal from others, recovered property for citizens that had been stolen, taken drugs off the streets, and have formed a bond with local law enforcement agencies that has built respect from those who help us do our job. The city has an established municipal court to handle law and ordinance violations. This, in turn, has created additional jobs in the city. We have upgraded to the standard in law enforcement with General Orders, computer software, and equipment. We have all of this to help us do our job better.

When I started here I said “Being professional and looking professional will result in a professional response from others.” Currently we are in line for State Accreditation. This isn’t something all agencies have achieved but I will work toward this agency being held to the higher standard in the state by being accredited. We received a grant last fall from the Governor’s Highway Safety Office. We have applied for that grant again and should know this fall if we received it or not. I have also applied for a COPS hiring grant. This grant would pay for one full-time officer for three years at 100%. I feel that this department is going in the right direction. Some people may not understand why we do things the way we do. My response to this is simply “Come to me and ask”. I have an open door policy and will be more than happy to address a concern or complaints.

As always, dial 911 for life threatening emergencies, call dispatch at 615-898-7770 for non-emergencies, and you may reach the department directly by calling 615-274-9217. Thank you for your continued support and we look forward to another great year here in Eagleville!

Eagleville Fire Department Fire Chief Terry Greene

Pheonix Leeman celebrated his 3rd birthday “fireman style” this year. The children got to tour the fire truck and inspect all the equipment. I think our own firemen enjoyed it as much as the birthday boy and his friends. A good time was had by all. We would like to thank Chad and Marci Leemon for their generous donation to the Eagleville Fire Dept.

We are all gearing up for the Eagleville Main Street Festival on June 4th. Please stop by and visit us at the Fire Department where you can tour the Smoke House and learn some fire safety tips. We will be looking forward to visiting with the community in which we serve.

As a reminder, we would like to make sure everyone has their address out on their mailbox and house so that in the event of an emergency situation the fire department or other emergency entity can quickly locate the residence. This has been an issue in the past and we want to ensure the quickest response times possible.

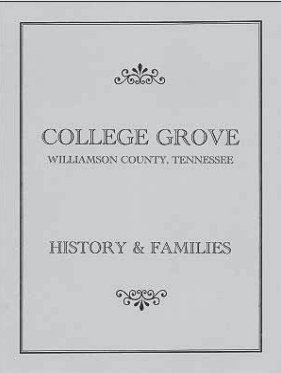

As mentioned before, anyone in need of a smoke detector for their home please contact Chief Terry Greene at City Hall. We want to make sure everyone in our community stays as safe as possible.

Thank-you for all the support that you give our department.

KAF Runners Pull All Nighter

Story and Photos by Spec Matthew Diaz, Fort Drum Public Affairs Office

Kandahar Airfield, Afghanistan - A crowd of achy, sweat-drenched people slowly starts to grow. As the group gets bigger the applause grows louder. More and more people stumble across the finish line, their race is done.

Twenty-four hours earlier; the music keeps the mood light as people stretch and hydrate for the challenge ahead. Everyone clambers to the starting point, eager to get the long day started. An official shouts "Go!" and the crowd bursts into motion, starting the Kandahar Airfield ultra-marathon.

The event allowed participants to support a charity of their choice through pledges based on distance completed. More than 350 runners showed up either as a member of the 35 teams or one of 30 people running alone, representing 21 charities.

"I was telling my wife, I don't know why I do these things anymore but when I was running through the night and all those runners were out there it really inspired me to keep going," said Master Chief Petty Officer Lee True, command master chief of the Role 3 and organizer of the event. "I'm really anxious to see the overall total of money that was raised."

As an avid runner, True has participated in more than 25 marathons in 15 different states, and four in Afghanistan. True ran 52 laps at 2.5km per lap for a total of 130km.

"I wanted to do this in honor of the soldiers out in the field who can't do this - as well as an opportunity to raise money for different charities," said True.

Among the participants were 12 runners from Headquarters and Headquarters Battalion 10th Mountain Division (LI).

Ten mountain soldiers teamed up under the banner of the chaplain's office supporting Japan tsunami relief through the American Red Cross.

"Right now I feel like a true champion," said Sgt. Jonathon McGeouch, RC-South chaplain's assistant and team.

Running by themselves from HHBN were Capt. Loan Vo and Chief Warrant Officer 2 Robert Sullivan. Vo, engineer projects manager for RC-South with Operations Company, ran 123km on behalf of the Lung Cancer Alliance.

Sullivan, officer in charge of the Automation Support Management Office for RC-South, went 125km as well, for the Children's Cancer Recovery Foundation and generated a staggering $21,050.

The idea for the run began in January when True hosted a marathon on KAF and noticed a large amount of first-time marathon runners and decided to put on an ultra marathon. It took several months to get everyone on board and all the pieces into place. By the end of the process, as most things in Afghanistan are, it was a multi-national effort.

"One of the things I had to figure out was how to put this on and how to make sure each of the units were responsible for raising money for their charities by themselves," said True.

"Once I figured that out, all I needed was the overall report at the finish."

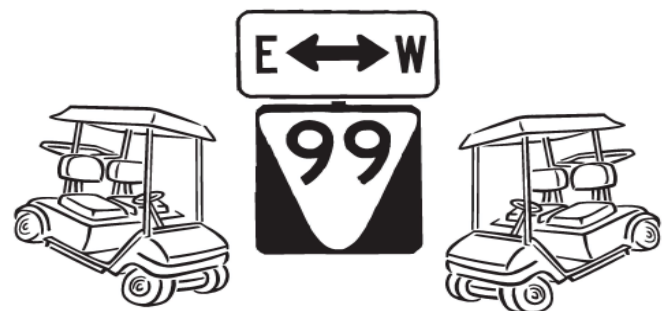

In total, participants ran 3,772 laps for a total distance of 9,430km.

Master Chief Petty Officer Lee True is the son of Don and Joy True of Eagleville, who wanted to share this experience of their son, serving in Afghanistan.

A Step Back in Time

By Bobbie Sue Shelton-Lonas

Memorial Day – A United States federal holiday observed on the last Monday of May. Formerly known as Decoration Day, it commemorates U. S. Soldiers who died while in the military service. First enacted to honor Union and Confederate soldiers following the Civil War, it was extended after World War I to honor Americans who have died in all wars.

By 1865 the practice of decorating soldiers had become widespread in the North. The first known observance was in Waterloo, New York on May 5, 1866, and each year thereafter. The friendship between General John Murray, a distinguished citizen of Waterloo and General John A Logan, who helped bring attention to the event nationwide, was likely a factor in the holiday’s growth.

In 1868, General John A. Logan, in his capacity as commander-in-chief of the Grand Army of Republic (the organization for Northern Civil War veterans) established Decoration Day as a time for the nation to decorate the graves of the war dead, with flowers. General Logan declared that Decoration Day should be observed on May 30. His reason for this date has been debated. It is recorded that the date was chosen because flowers would be in bloom all over the country. Another source records it was chosen because it was not the anniversary of a battle.

The first large observance was held that year at Arlington National Cemetery, across the Potomac River from Washington D. C. The ceremonies centered around the mourning-draped veranda of the Arlington mansion, once the home of General Robert E. Lee. Various Washington officials, including Gen. and Mrs. Ulysses S. Grant, presided over the ceremonies. After speeches, children from the Soldiers’ and Sailors’ Orphan Home and members of the Grand Army of Republic made their way through the cemetery, strewing flowers on both Union and Confederate graves, reciting prayers and singing hymns.

Today, cities in both, North and South, claim to be the birthplace of Decoration (Memorial) Day. Macon and Columbus, Georgia, claim the title, as well as Richmond Virginia. A stone in a Carbondale, Illinois cemetery carries the statement that the first Decoration Day ceremony took place there on April 29, 1866. Carbondale was the wartime home of General Logan. Approximately 25 places have been named in connection with the origin of Memorial Day, many of them in the South where most of the war dead were buried.

In 1966, the official birthplace of Decoration Day was declared, by Congress and President Lyndon Johnson, to be Waterloo, New York. The observance, held 100 years earlier on May 5, 1866, was recorded as the first Decoration Day honoring local veterans, who had fought in the Civil War. Businesses closed and residents flew flags at half-staff. Supporters of Waterloo’s claim say earlier observances in other places were either, informal, not community-wide or one-time events.

Although the holiday is still often referred to as “Decoration Day”, “Memorial Day” was first used in 1882. It did not become more common until after World War II and was not declared the official name by Federal Law until 1967. On June 28, 1968, the Congress passed the uniform Holidays Bill, which moved three holidays from their traditional dates to a specified Monday in order to create a convenient three-day weekend. The holidays included Washington’s Birthday, Veterans Day and Memorial Day. The change moved Memorial from its traditional May 30 date to the last Monday in May. The law took effect at the federal level in 1971.

Today, many Americans observe Memorial Day by visiting cemeteries and memorials. A national moment of remembrance takes place at 3 p.m. local time. Another tradition is to fly the flag of the United States at half-staff from dawn until noon local time. One of the longest-standing traditions is the running of the Indianapolis 500, an auto race which has been held in conjunction with Memorial Day since 1911. It runs on the Sunday preceding the Memorial Day holiday

Also, Memorial Day often marks the start of the summer vacation season and Labor Days its end.

Flag Day

June 14th, do you recognize this important date? When you look at our American Flag, do you have a proud, patriotic feeling? Did you know that date is the birthday of our national flag? On June 14th, 1777, the Continental Congress proposed that the United States have a national flag, instead of the British Union Jack (nickname for the British Flag).

“Resolved, that the flag of the United States be thirteen stripes, alternate red and white; that the union be thirteen stars, white in a blue field representing a new constellation” (Marine Committee of the Second Continental Congress, June 14, 1777).

The American flag has changed designs more than any other flag in the world. There are many theories surrounding the birth of the “Grand Union”, our nation’s first flag. According to the one that seems most probable, Betsy Ross, an American seamstress, was called upon by three members of a Committee from the Continental Congress in May 1776. George Washington, Robert Morris and George Ross, asked Betsy to sew the first United States flag, which they had a design for.

At the time, George Washington was the head of the Continental Army. Robert Morris was a very rich man, due to the large amount of land he owned, and George Ross was an all around, well known man from Philadelphia.

Supporting this theory are records from Betsy Ross giving the exact sequence of how things took place. As mentioned before, in May, she was contracted by the Committee and within a month or so, she completed what is now known as the first United States Flag. The flag consisted of thirteen stripes and thirteen stars forming a constellation, which stood for the first thirteen States of the Union.

A month later, the Declaration of Independence was read aloud for the first time. With the new flag and the Declaration of Independence, a new nation was born.

During the War of 1812 between the British and Americans, lawyer Francis Scott Key was escorting a prisoner to freedom by ship when he saw an American flag surviving a battle in Baltimore Harbor. The flag inspired him to write the poem which provides the words for the national anthem. The actual flag now hangs in the Museum of American History in Washington, D.C. Today the “Star-Spangled Banner” is sung at large public gatherings such as sports events. Many television stations play the anthem before the station closes down for the night.

There were few public ceremonies honoring the Stars and Stripes until 100 years later, in 1877, when on, June 14, it was flown from every government building in honor of the centennial of the adoption of a national flag. Schools had unfurled American flags over their doors or outside the buildings long before this, but in 1890, North Dakota and New Jersey made a law that required their schools to fly the flag daily. The first official Flag Day was observed in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania in 1893. New York also proclaimed June 14 as Flag Day 1897. Other states were slow to follow. The thought being, the day was too close to Memorial Day and Independence Day.

The Origin of Memorial Day - Flag Day And The Pledge of Allegiance

After much persistence and the support of many individuals, organizations, mayors, governors and five presidents, President Woodrow Wilson issued a proclamation requesting that June 14 become National Flag Day. In 1927 President Coolidge issued a second proclamation, and finally in 1949, that President Truman signed an Act of Congress designating June 14th of each year as National Flag Day.

Although Flag Day is not an official federal holiday for most states, on June 14, 1937, Pennsylvania became the first (and only) U.S. state to celebrate Flag Day as a state holiday.

Today, our national flag consists of thirteen equal horizontal stripes of red (top and bottom) alternating with white, with a blue rectangle bearing fifty small, white (five-pointed stars), arranged in nine offset horizontal rows of six stars (top and bottom) alternating with rows of five stars. The fifty stars represent the 50 states and the 13 stripes represent the original thirteen colonies that rebelled against the British monarchy and became the first states in the Union.

During National Flag Day this year, replace old flags if needed, show your pride and patriotism and fly “Old Glory”, especially on its 234th birthday. It’s also a time to remember and honor military men and women who defend our flag and our country.

The Pledge of Allegiance

The Pledge of Allegiance is one of the nation’s most honored secular symbols, viewed by many in the same light as the National Anthem. While looking up the official meaning of PATRIOTISM, I found it printed several different ways, but the meaning of all of them can be put into 9 words: Patriotism is the love and devotion to one’s country. As a child in the lower grades in school, one of the first things we did each morning was pledging our allegiance to the flag. In many cases, a different student was selected to lead the pledge, which was an honor.

The Pledge of Allegiance of the United States is an oath of loyalty to the national flag and the Republic of the United States of America, originally composed in August, 1892 by Francis Bellamy, a Baptist Minister. The Pledge has been modified four times since then. The original pledge “I pledge allegiance to my Flag and the Republic for which it stands, one nation indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.”

In October 1892 the word “to” was added: “to the Republic for which it stands.”

In 1923, the National Flag Conference called for the words “my Flag” to be changed to “the Flag of the United States”, so that new immigrants would not confuse loyalties between their birth countries and the United States.

In 1924, only a year later, the words “of America” were added, “the Flag of the United States of America.

Louis A Bowman, Chaplain of the Illinois Society of the Sons of the American Revolution, was the first to initiate the addition of “under God” to the Pledge of Allegiance. At a meeting, in 1948. Bowman led the Society in the Pledge with two words “under God” added. He stated that the words came from Lincoln’s Gettysburg Address. Though not all manuscript versions of the Gettysburg Address contain the words “under God”, all the reporters’ transcripts of the speech as delivered do, as perhaps Lincoln may have deviated from his prepared text and inserted the phrase when he said “that the nation shall, under God, have a new birth of freedom. In 1951, the Knights of Columbus also began including the words “under God” in the Pledge of Allegiance. In New York City, on April 30, 1951, the Board of Directors of the Knights of Columbus adopted a resolution to amend the text of their Pledge of Allegiance at the opening of each of the meetings. Several attempts were made between 1948 and 1954 to have “under God” added to the Pledge, but failed.

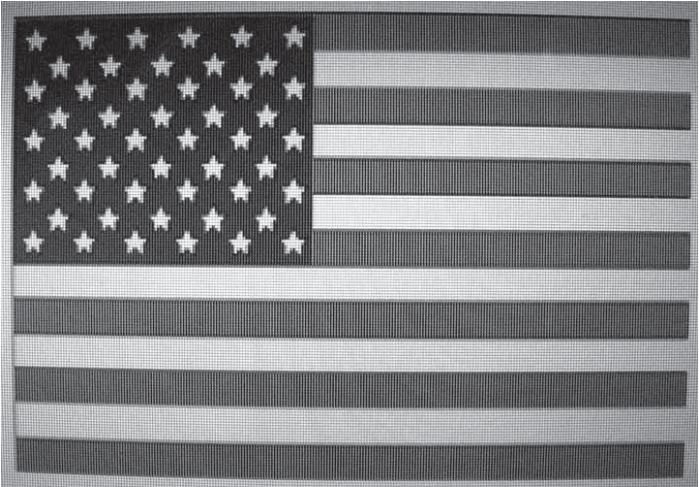

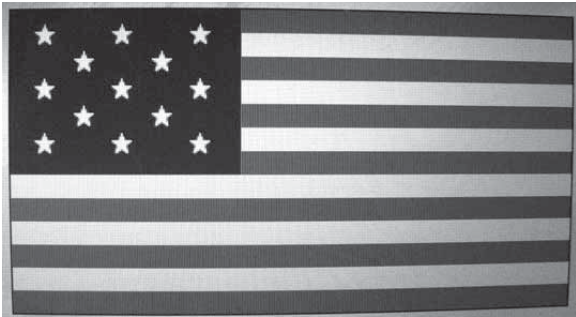

On February 7, 1954, some American presidents honored Lincoln’s birthday, which is February 12th, by attending services at the church Lincoln attended, New York Avenue Presbyterian Church. With President Eisenhower sitting in Lincoln’s pew, the church pastor, George MacPherson Docherty, delivered a sermon based on the Gettysburg Address titled “A New Birth of Freedom.” He argued that the nations might lay not in arms but its spirit and higher purpose. He noted that the Pledge’s sentiments could be those of any nation, that “there was something missing in the pledge, and that which was missing was the characteristic and definitive factor in the American way of life.” He cited Lincoln’s words, “under God” as defining words that set the United States apart from other nations.

President Eisenhower, though raised a Jehovah’s Witness, had been baptized a Presbyterian just a year before. He responded enthusiastically to Docherty in a conversation following the service. Eisenhower acted on his suggestion the next day and on February 8, 1954, Rep. Charles Oakman introduced a bill to that effect. Congress passed the necessary legislation and Eisenhower signed the bill into law on Flag Day, June 14, 1954.

Over the years, many objections were raised after the addition of the phrase “under God”. Critics contend that a government requiring or promoting this phrase violates protections against the establishment of religion, guaranteed in the establishment clause of the First Amendment.

On March 11, 2010, the United States Court of Appeals for the Ninth Circuit upheld the words “under God” in the Pledge of Allegiance. The appellate court ruled that the words were of a “ceremonial and patriotic nature” and did not constitute an establishment of religion.

I pledge allegiance to the flag of the United States of America, and to the republic for which it stands, one nation under God, indivisible, with liberty and justice for all.

Spencer Lafayette Loyd age 82, a life long spiritual leader and resident of Eagleville, achieved his ultimate goal by going home to his Heavenly Father on Sunday, May 15, 2011 at his home in Eagleville. At the time of his passing he was surrounded by those whom he loved and devoted his entire life for. He was born July 8, 1928 at Crescent Tennessee in southern Rutherford County and was the son of Walter and Adel Loyd, who preceded him in death. During his childhood he was raised on tenant farms throughout the Middle Tennessee area where he shared the chores with his four brothers and two sisters. At an early age he attended both the Crescent and Mars Hill Churches of Christ, where he developed a close relationship with God that led him through his entire adult life. He graduated from Christiana High School in 1947, where he played basketball, baseball, served as an officer on the student counsel and was president of the Future Farmers of America Chapter. Upon completion of high school he attended David Lipscomb University for two years, where he majored in bible studies. During his studies at David Lipscomb he preached at several different Churches of Christ throughout Rutherford County before leaving David Lipscomb. In 1948 he became an employee of the State of Tennessee Highway Department, where he worked until he was drafted into the United States Army in 1950 during the Korean Conflict where he was assigned to Fort Jackson South Carolina, where he remained until 1952. On Oct 21, 1950 he married Mary Ellen Taylor of Eagleville Tennessee, the daughter of the late Fred Nance Taylor and Maye Bennett Taylor. After completing his obligation with the US Army, Spencer attended Knox Business College in Knoxville. He and Mary Ellen moved back to Eagleville where he was employed by AVCO in Nashville Tennessee for about one year. In 1953 he began his career with State Farm Insurance Company where he worked for 38 loyal years, before retiring in 1994 as an Underwriting Specialist in the East Tennessee Automotive Underwriting Division. After his retirement from State Farm, he worked for DeHoffs Christian Book Store in Murfreesboro until his failing health in 2010. In 1953 he began attending the Eagleville Church of Christ where he lead singing for 58 years, served as an elder, teacher and substituted for the regular pulpit minister. During his life he was the speaker at several Vacation Bible Schools, gospel meetings, conducted several weddings and performed countless funerals. He was also involved in several community service events, with his most notable contribution being the baseball coach for the Eagleville Little League and Eagleville Babe Ruth programs for 15 years. During his life he touched several lives with his love for God, his family and community. He is survived by his wife and companion of 60 years Mary Ellen Taylor Loyd, two sons Michael Taylor (Jeanna) Loyd Sr, serving in the US Army's Africa Command in Germany, Mendell Bennett Loyd, Eagleville TN; six grandchildren Michael Loyd Jr., Jessica Loyd Taylor, Katarina Loyd McPherson, William Trevor Goodson, Taylor Madison Goodson and Aliyah Loyd; three great-grandchildren, Malachi Taylor, Mary Grace Taylor and Layla McPherson; four brothers Walter Giles (Nellie) Loyd, Charles Ralph Loyd, Ray Donald (Barbara) Loyd, Finus Allen Loyd; two sisters Martha Jane Sullivan and Amy Loyd, with several nieces and nephews. ### Healthy Summer Reading

With summer fast approaching, it's a good time to get a head start on reading ideas. In 2010, unemployment continued to rise, causing economic uncertainty and the loss of health benefits for many Americans. Every year Library Journal (LJ) publishes a list of the best consumer health books. Highlights from the 2010 list are as follows:

Boyd, David R., *Dodging the Toxic Bullet: How To Protect Yourself from Everyday Environmental Health Hazards. He outlines daily hazards ranging from air and water pollution to unsafe consumer products. He then offers steps that people can take to avoid or minimize these dangers and encourages them to advocate for a clean environment.

Buckley, Julie A., M.D. *Healing Our Autistic Children: A Medical Plan for Restoring Your Child's Health. As a pediatrician and the mother of an autistic child, Buckley knows her subject well. Here, she provides clear explanations of the treatment options available for children on the autism spectrum. She also provides action lists to help parents keep track of issues and extensive references for further information. An excellent book for parents of newly diagnosed children.

Collins, Francis S., M.D. *The Language of Life: DNA and the Revolution in Personalized Medicine. Collins (director, National Insts. of Health & former director, National Human Genome Inst.) offers readers information to help them understand how genetics and DNA contribute to health. Noting that many diseases are hereditary, he discusses the latest medical genetics research and how it can apply to medical care. He also uses case histories to illustrate his points and predicts what the future will bring.

Fox, Jackie. *From Zero to Mastectomy: What I Learned and You Need To Know About Stage 0 Breast Cancer. When Fox was diagnosed with stage 0 breast cancer, also called ductal carcinoma in situ (DCIS), her doctor said that it was not very serious, but she soon learned that the treatment was the same as that for other breast cancers. This chronicle of her diagnosis, treatment, and breast reconstruction will help women diagnosed with this condition learn about their options and make decisions regarding their medical care.

Graber, Alan L., M.D., & others. A Life of Control: Stories of Living with Diabetes. Vanderbilt Univ. Diabetes is a major U.S. health problem; this distinctive book presents the stories of 40 people living with the disease, including a nurse who uses uncontrolled diabetes to lose weight despite the danger, a businessman who has to fight with his insurance provider, and a woman utilizing a trained service dog to avoid diabetic coma. There is also a glossary; information about prevention, complications, and new technologies; and a list of relevant websites.

Rankin, Lissa, M.D. *What's Up Down There?: Questions You'd Only Ask Your Gynecologist If She Was Your Best Friend. Rankin, a gynecologist who maintains the website www.owningpink.com, provides the answers to common questions about female anatomy and physiology, sexuality, fertility, childbirth, menopause, and more. She also gives women a pep talk to increase their self-confidence.

Mukherjee, Siddhartha, M.D. *The Emperor of All Maladies: A Biography of Cancer. Oncologist and cancer researcher Mukherjee (Columbia Univ.) calls his book a biography, but it is really an in-depth look at the history of cancer, attempts to discover possible causes, the personalities of those involved in early endeavors to eradicate it, and the current state of cancer research. Vignettes dealing with some of the author's patients add to the picture. A fascinating look at a very complex subject.

Potter, Steven. Designer Genes: A New Era in the Evolution of Man. Developmental biologist Potter (Children's Hosp. Medical Ctr., Cincinnati) explains the latest developments in genetics that will allow parents to choose a child's genetic makeup. Of course, this is still years away, but the ethical implications are enormous. The explanations of the science are fascinating and easy to understand; the discussion of the possible applications is thought-provoking.

THE BUZZ AROUND CO-OP

SUMMER TIME IS NEAR - FLY SEASON IS HERE!!

Warmer weather is the beginning of the dreaded fly season. You can win the war on flies if you work though good barn and pasture management along with a system of fly control.

Here at Co-Op we have a wide range of fly control products, and you may need to use several methods. Some just keep flies away from the animal, others kill the flies or the larvae with everything from insecticides to bait. Pour-ons, baits, sprays, rubs, dusts, traps, misters, feed - throughs, these are all your tools of good fly control. Attack your fly problem on multiple levels and you and your livestock will have a good summer season.

Please stop by the Eagleville Co-Op on June 4 during the Main Street Festival. We are planning some good sales for our customers. Hope to see you soon!

The Rockvale Middle School Football/ Competition Cheerleaders will be holding a Carwash on Saturday, June 18th at the Maxi Muffler on Broad Street

The Cicadas Are Here

They are crawling out from underground, where they have been hiding in the darkness for almost two decades. They are invading the midwestern United States, and are filling forests and the skies as they swarm. Thousands of them will cry out together day and night. Should you be frightened? Should you try to prepare yourself?

Not really. The only preparation you may need to greet the cicadas is a pair of earplugs, because the worst they can do is keep you up at night.

Cicadas are flying, plant-feeding insects that are most famous for their powerful singing voices and rare appearances.

Cicadas are often mistaken for locusts, but they're actually more like leafhoppers or aphids. They are classified in the Order Hemiptera -- a distinction given to all insects with piercing and sucking mouthparts. There are over two-hundred species of cicada in the family called Cicadidae.

Cicadas have three pairs of legs, all about the same length. Consequently, they aren't adept at jumping, though they do try. Large, compound eyes situated on each side of their head give them wide peripheral vision. Three tiny eyes on the top of the head (called ocelli) allow them to watch for predators from above. Small, bristle-like antennae are located just behind the ocelli.

The cicada's mouth parts are enclosed in a long, thin, beak-like sheath. The sheath, called the labium, is retracted between the legs when the insect is not feeding. The labium contains four needle-like stylets used for feeding. Cicadas feed by piercing the surface of plants with their stylets. They use them like a straw to suck up the sap from plants.

The cicada's claim to fame is its singing. The high-pitched song is actually a mating call belted out by males. Each species has its own distinctive song that only attracts females of its own kind. This allows several different species to co-exist.

Even though cicadas may land on you or bump into you, you don't have to worry about getting bitten. Cicadas are harmless. They may cause some slowing of the growth of trees from the amount of sap the cicadas consume, but they won't cause permanent damage. Cicadas don't bite or sting in any way. The worst they will do is annoy you with their incessant singing.

The life span of an adult cicada is short. As mysteriously as they arrive, they will disappear. Most will be eaten by birds and other predators. Even the nymphs are not safe below the ground, as they are often preyed upon by beetle larvae and other ground-dwelling parasites.

Cicadas go through three stages of development: egg, nymph and adult. Their egg is laid in tree branches and after hatching, falls to the ground.

In its larval stage, it's called a nymph and can live in the ground for many years. Some periodic broods or nests of cicada larvae live in the ground for 17 years! After emerging from the ground, cicadas will attach themselves to trees, plants, or structures until they pop out of their skin and become an adult. As an adult, a cicada will only live from 2 weeks to 40 days.

If you live to be 75 years old, you will only have about four opportunities in your life to hear the song of the cicadas. If you live in an infested area, you won't be able to miss it. But if you don't, it might be worth your time to go out of your way to hear one of nature's most powerful and elusive performers.

Rutherford County 6th Grade All Star Honor Band

On May 13, Rockvale Middle School hosted the Rutherford County 6th grade All Star Honor Band event. Beginning at 8:30 that morning, students from Blackman Middle School, Central Magnet School, Christiana Middle School, Discovery School at Reeves-Rogers, LaVergne Middle School, Middle Tennessee Christian School, Oakland Middle School, Rock Springs Middle School, Rockvale Middle School, Siegel Middle School, Smyrna Middle School, Stewarts Creek Middle School, Thurman Francis Arts Academy, Whitworth-Buchanan Middle School and our own Eagleville Middle School gathered for a day of instruction, practice, learning and fun.

Students were divided into 2 bands with Eagleville participating in the Green Band. Guest Conductor Jeff Schletzer, band director at Father Ryan High School, lead 120 students through the music pieces creating a band out of students who had never played together before that day. Mr. Schletzer has been director at Father Ryan since 1981 and prior to this he taught at McEwen High School for four years. Since being at Father Ryan the band program there has grown and expanded. It has received local and national honors that include Championships in competitions in Tennessee, Alabama and Kentucky. They are a featured band in the 2012 Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade, one of 11 bands chosen from over 150 applicants. The Yellow Band was also comprised of 120 students representing various schools. It was conducted by Brenda Monson. She currently directs Blackman High School Bands. Prior to that she taught in middle and high schools in Nebraska.

Beginning at 5:00, family and friends waited excitedly outside of the Rockvale Middle School Auditorium. They quickly purchased their tickets and filled the auditorium seats. The stage was already crowded with rows of chairs, music stands, and excited students warming up and chatting with classmates and new friends from middle schools across the county. Promptly at 6:05, Mr. Schletzer was introduced to the audience. Speaking to both the parents and local school personnel, he bragged on the musical ability of the students and their work ethic. And then the concert began. Instruments poised the students focused their attention on the Conductor, ready to begin the first note. Selections by the Green Band included Westwind Overture, Centurion Attack of the Slide Trombones, the Banana Boat Song, and Animal Farm. At the conclusion of this concert, students and the audience quickly exited to make room for the second concert of the evening by the Yellow Band. After a brief introduction, Mrs. Monson praised the students and their efforts that day. With their focus on her, the students began their first note. The selections included the Marchman African Festival, Prehistoric Suite, Colliding Visions and More Cowbell. And thus concluded the 2011 Rutherford County 6th

Grade All Star Honor Band event. It was a great day for students and schools across the county.

FROM THE WORLD WIDE WEB - WWW

For those of you that don't have internet email, you tend to miss out on some pretty good statistics or jokes that get passed around the internet. Enjoy some of this interesting fun. "Intended for fun only. No guarantees to authenticity."

One day, when I was a freshman in high school, I saw a kid from my class was walking home from school. His name was Kyle. It looked like he was carrying all of his books.

I thought to myself, "Why would anyone bring home all his books on a Friday? He must really be a nerd."

I had quite a weekend planned (parties and a football game with my friends tomorrow afternoon), so I shrugged my shoulders and went on.

As I was walking, I saw a bunch of kids running toward him. They ran at him, knocking all his books out of his arms and tripping him so he landed in the dirt. His glasses went flying, and I saw them land in the grass about ten feet from him. He looked up and I saw this terrible sadness in his eyes.

My heart went out to him. So, I jogged over to him as he crawled around looking for his glasses, and I saw a tear in his eye.

As I handed him his glasses, I said, "Those guys are jerks. They really should get lives."

"He looked at me and said, "Hey thanks!"

There was a big smile on his face. It was one of those smiles that showed real gratitude.

I helped him pick up his books, and asked him where he lived. As it turned out, he lived near me, so I asked him why I had never seen him before.

He said he had gone to private school before now.

I would have never hung out with a private school kid before.

We talked all the way home, and I carried some of his books.

He turned out to be a pretty cool kid. I asked him if he wanted to play a little football with my friends and he said yes.

We hung out all weekend and the more I got to know Kyle, the more I liked him, and my friends thought the same of him.

Monday morning came, and there was Kyle with the huge stack of books again. I stopped him and said, "Boy, you are gonna really build some serious muscles with this pile of books everyday! He just laughed and handed me half the books.

Over the next four years, Kyle and I became best friends..

When we were seniors we began to think about college. Kyle decided on Georgetown and I was going to NC State. I knew that we would always be friends, that the miles would never be a problem.

He was going to be a doctor and I was going for business on a football scholarship.

Kyle was valedictorian of our class. I teased him all the time about being a nerd.

He had to prepare a speech for graduation. I was so glad it wasn't me having to get up there and speak.

Graduation day, I saw Kyle. He looked great. He was one of those guys that really found himself during high school. He filled out and actually looked good in glasses. He had more dates than I had and all the girls loved him.

Boy, sometimes I was jealous! Today was one of those days.

I could see that he was nervous about his speech. So, I smacked him on the back and said, "Hey, big guy, you'll be great!"

He looked at me with one of those looks (the really grateful one) and smiled. "Thanks," he said.

As he started his speech, he cleared his throat, and began.

"Graduation is a time to thank those who helped you make it through those tough years. Your parents, your teachers, your siblings, maybe a coach...but mostly, your friends..."

I am here to tell all of you that being a friend to someone is the best gift you can give them. I am going to tell you a story."

I just looked at my friend with disbelief as he told the story of the first day we met. He had planned to kill himself over the weekend. He talked of how he had cleaned out his locker so his Mom wouldn't have to do it later and was carrying his stuff home. He looked hard at me and gave me a little smile. "Thankfully, I was saved. My friend saved me from doing the unspeakable."

I heard the gasp go through the crowd as this handsome, popular boy told us all about his weakest moment. I saw his Mom and Dad looking at me and smiling that same grateful smile.

Not until that moment did I realize its depth. Never underestimate the power of your actions. With one small gesture you can change a person's life, for better or for worse.

God puts us all in each others lives to impact one another in some way. Look for God in others.

"Friends are angels who lift us to our feet when our wings have trouble remembering how to fly."

There is no beginning or end... Yesterday is history... Tomorrow is a mystery... Today is a gift.

Show your friends how much you care.

Scrapbooking For The Insane

I want to put together a scrapbook of our vacation. I have the scrapbook. I have the pictures; 942 of them.

The only thing I'm missing is the left side of my brain. Or maybe it's the right side. Okay, I'm missing the side that helps me think.

This book is something I hope to have for many years and I hope to look at it many times during those years. I want to be able to say "Look at these beautiful pictures!" not "What moron put this book together? Oh yeah... me."

Order is the key, I think, but what order? There are so many ways to order them: Chronologically, by place, by person, by color, alphabetically. Out of all of these ways to order the pictures, I know there must be one right way.

I'm sure there are some free spirits who might think that throwing a stack of photographs into the air and placing them in the scrapbook in the order that they fell is a perfectly acceptable way to put a scrapbook together. These people don't wear matching socks either.

On the other hand, if they have no decisions to make or fashion rules to follow, their life is probably much less stressful than mine.

Oh, to be a free spirit!

Even after I have decided on the order, there are still many other decisions to make. For example, the paper for the background has to be determined. Do I use all the same color for consistency, or do I mix it up?

Although I aspire to be a free spirit one day, throwing all the pictures into the air would still give me a heart attack. Still, a certain amount of chaos in one's life tends to give one a bit of perspective. That's why I had children. So, my background paper will most likely be an eclectic mix of stripes and polka dots; not on the same page, of course. That would just be crazy, wouldn't it?

Neurotic people should never attempt something as complex as a scrapbook. I have seriously considered paying someone to do this, but then, what if they did it wrong? Would I even notice? The real point is, would anyone else notice?

Someday, there may be a scrapbook expert that looks at my book. I will be holding my breath, hoping for a two-thumbs up from this paragon of scrapbook perfection. My fear is that she will smile politely and cringe inside.

Then she will say something inspiring like, "That's interesting," because that's what you say to people who are barely hanging on to reason.

I do, I really do ask myself why I should care what she will think. Then I realize that talking to myself just means I'm a lunatic as well as neurotic.

So no, I will have to determine what is the right way to do this, and then do it myself.

Okay, so there are worse problems in the world than my scrapbook issues. Having kids was supposed to remedy my perspective on things like this. I can already imagine one of them saying, "You need to get a life, Mom."

True, but if I had one, what would I do with all the pictures?

Little Stories About You & Me

By Nancy Allen

A Place For Kent's Things

Kent could barely hold his head up. He hadn't been to work in three days. His stomach growled, but his body was too heavy to respond. Sleep was all he wanted to do, just sleep. What's the use he thought, nobody cares. If I checked out who would notice? She wouldn't give a damn.

The phone rang. "Shut up," he yelled. "My head hurts." But it didn't let up and finally the answering machine came on.

"Kent, it's Sam. Where are you, man? Mama said she hasn't seen you in two weeks. Anyway, I need to borrow the truck. Call me back."

Sam was Kent's little brother. He was always borrowing something. Kent almost laughed while listening to the message. For sure if Sam borrowed the truck it would come back without gas. It always had.

I should call him back thought Kent so he pulled himself across the bed to the phone.

"Hey, little bro. Sure get your friends to drop you off to get the truck."

"Thanks, I need to haul some baseball equipment over to the game. Why don't you come with me?"

"Sure, I can do that. Give a half and hour."

Kent reached for the anti-depressant bottle and popped two pills in his mouth. He owed his little brother this much. I can do this he thought.

Kent and Sam went to the game. They laughed, told off color jokes and ate popcorn. Sam told his friend that Kent was doing great. When they returned to Kent's house, Kent handed Sam the truck keys. "You need this old truck more than I do," he said.

"Do you mean it?" asked Sam.

"Sure, you're my main man. I love you," said Kent. "And, here take this fifty dollar bill--you'll be needing some gas money."

Sam took the money, laughing, because he knew that was so.

After Sam drove away in the truck, Kent drove his car to his mother's apartment where she had lived since she and Kent's father divorced. He sat on the couch with his arm around her.

"I brought you a present," he said. "It's that picture album I put together that you love so much. See there is Sam and me when we were little fellows. And there is Ann. I know Ann is gone, but Tom is still with you. He takes good care of you and I thought he might enjoy these golf clubs since he's playing some now."

"Honey, you really shouldn't give away your golf clubs. You might want to play again sometime."

"No, I don't need them. You will see Tom when he comes by to check on you. I want him to have them"

"Well, if you are sure. You are being mighty generous today," said his mother.

Kent laughed and gave his mother a hug. "I love you," he said.

He walked out the door without looking back, went to his apartment and emptied the bottle of pills into his hand. He looked at them as he poured a jigger of whisky. One-by-one Kent began swallowing the pills and he downed the whisky.

He reached and turned off the answering machine and fell into bed—flushed, warm and relieved.

The phone was ringing, but this time there was no one to answer it.

Connected Tennessee's Computers 4 Kids Program
Presents More Than 150 Computers to the Boys & Girls Clubs of Middle Tennessee

Nashville, TN – May 23, 2011 - Connected Tennessee's Computers 4 Kids "Preparing Tennessee's Next Generation for Success" program awarded the Boys & Girls Clubs of Middle Tennessee with more than 150 brand new computers. The American Recovery and Reinvestment Act-funded project deploys computers, academic support programs, and workforce training to two disparate, but especially at-risk, populations: those in the state's foster care system who are "aging out" as they turn 18, and youth who are active in the state's 76 Boys & Girls Clubs. Over the next three years, the program will impact the lives of nearly 60,000 youth across the state.

State Senator Bill Ketron, a supporter of the Computers 4 Kids program since its inception more than three years ago, remarked that the impact of the computers throughout Middle Tennessee would be significant.

"Over the past three years, Connected Tennessee's Computers 4 Kids program has changed the lives of children across Tennessee with the gift of technology," stated Ketron. "This program has made great strides in closing the digital divide in Tennessee by putting computers into the hands of those citizens that need them the most, and the 'Preparing Tennessee's Next Generation for Success' project is going to impact nearly 60,000 more deserving youth. Today I congratulate the Computers 4 Kids program for launching this new phase of the program and I wish Connected Tennessee much continued success in the future."

The "Preparing Tennessee's Next Generation for Success" project is a result of a $2.3 million American Recovery and Reinvestment Act grant awarded to the C4K program in August 2010 by the U.S. Department of Commerce's National Telecommunications and Information Administration's (NTIA) Broadband Technology Opportunities Program (BTOP). BTOP provides grants to support the deployment of broadband infrastructure, enhance and expand public computer centers, and encourage sustainable adoption of broadband service.

Today's event was part of a series of celebration events that will take place across the state throughout the summer. To date, the Computers 4 Kids program has distributed more than 2,000 computers statewide.
