Congratulations Middle School Lady Eagles Volleyball Team On Tournament Championship

The Middle School Lady Eagles Volleyball team coached by Alan Pepper won the Rutherford County Tournament Championship Trophy on August 24th.

The Lady Eagles were ranked first place for the season games after a coin toss decision between the Eagleville Eagles and the Lascassas Panthers.

It was with much anticipation that the championship match was a final playoff between the two teams. Both teams played three very good matches the first was won by the Lady Eagles with a score of 27 to 25. The second match was won by the Lady Panthers by a score of 27 to 25.

The Kittrell gymnasium was filled with excitement as the third match began to take place. Coach Pepper lead the Lady Eagles to a final victory and a championship match with a score of 15 to 10. The following young ladies make up the Eagleville Middle School Varsity Team: Kaylee Young, Taylor Reed, Cassidy Shockey, Mary Laidig, Miranda Cohen, Theresa Posada, Ashley Tidwell, Abigail Lewis, Katelyn Boyett, Jessica Mortensen, and Nichole Duke. These young ladies and Coach Pepper are back to back County Tournament Champions 2008 and 2009.

Congratulations Lady Eagles for a great season. Eagleville School and your community are proud of you for all your hard work and dedication.

New Eagleville Eye Clinic Slated to Open Spring 2010

BY MELISSA BUCHANAN

Construction has begun and is well underway for a new Eagleville Eye Clinic, a family eye care practice owned by local resident Dr. Rena Cron. With hopes of opening the doors of its new facility in Spring of 2010, the new clinic will be located in very close proximity of its current location on Main Street; just outside of the downtown Eagleville area.

Visibility will be key with the Eagleville Eye Clinic's nearly 4,000 sq. ft. building that will also include separate space and entry for another professional business or medical practice.

"We've been in the area for so many years, but there are so many people who do not know we exist," explained Dr. Cron, whose current practice is tucked away inside the Eagleville Medical Clinic, owned by Dr. Dennis Carter.

According to a representative from Dr. Carter's Murfreesboro-based family practice, the Eagleville Medical Clinic will eventually be torn down, building a new doctor’s office in its place, though a definitive date for construction has not been set.

The new Eagleville Eye Clinic will occupy over half of the new facility, which will be ADA approved in its entirety. “This is something very simple that we will be able to offer in our new building,” explained Dr. Cron.

While the space currently occupied by the Eagleville Eye Clinic can accommodate a person requiring a wheelchair, due to size constraints, it can be a little difficult. The new building will have wheelchair access via a ramp, with wide entryways and hallways throughout.

A full-service eye care clinic, the new facility will “enable us to take care of people more efficiently,” said Cron, adding that with the new space, the Eagleville Eye Clinic will also increase its staff, by adding at least one part-time employee.

Larger exam rooms, (with one dedicated to contact lens wear), new equipment, and a bigger dispensary to display frames and allow for patients to select their eyewear more comfortably are just a few of things patients will have to look forward to at the Eagleville Eye Clinic’s new location.

The Eagleville Eye Clinic began as a satellite office owned by Dr. Smith, who also maintained a busy practice in Murfreesboro. After relocating her family to the Eagleville area, Dr. Cron began to work for Dr. Smith, covering the Eagleville practice on a part-time basis, while still maintaining her patients within a practice in the Southern Hills Hospital area of Nashville.

Purchasing the practice from Dr. Smith seven years ago, Dr. Cron gradually pulled out of the Nashville market completely; though some of her patients still make the scenic drive into Eagleville for their eye care. “Since I was already covering the Eagleville office, it made a perfect transition for me to purchase the practice from Dr. Smith,” she said.

“We’ve continued to grow over the last few years, and have outgrown the small amount of space we are leasing from the medical clinic,” said Dr. Cron, whose patients come from each of the surrounding counties, in addition to Rutherford County. While drawing the plans out for her new facility, Dr. Cron was able to customize it to suit the needs of her practice, while providing ample space for parking.

Dr. Cron, who has been in practice for 19 years, has worked in larger practices across the Middle Tennessee area, but has found that, “the small town practice works very well.” Slower paced, Dr. Cron and her staff are able to show hometown hospitality, while delivering thorough, high-quality eye care.

“Even though I don’t carry weekend hours, I also provide emergency care,” Cron added. “That is one of the advantages of living in a small town. I live in Eagleville, so I am able to meet you at the office, or talk you through it, rather than going to the emergency room.”

The Eagleville Eye Clinic is a family practice, providing primary care for a patient of any age and accepts many insurance plans. For more information, feel free to visit them on the web at www.eaglevilleeye.com

Food for Fines Week is October 18 - 24 "Give to a Good Cause for What You Owe"

Got overdue library fines - and some extra groceries? If so, the Linebaugh Public Library System is offering you an easy way to pay off those overdue fines! For one week, patrons of the library will have the option to bring in canned goods to pay off library fines. Not only will you be getting rid of some fines, but you will be helping your fellow neighbor too.

From October 18 through October 24, 2009, the Linebaugh Public Library System (Linebaugh Library in Murfreesboro, Myrtle Glanton Lord Library at Patterson Park, Smyrna Public Library in Smyrna, and the Eagleville Bicentennial Public Library in Eagleville) will be collecting food donations. Smyrna's collection will go to the Smyrna -La Vergne Food Bank, and all other sites will collect for the Salvation Army.

Bring your canned goods to the Library Circulation desk, and we will waive your fines for overdue items.

Charges for lost or damaged items cannot be waived. We will waive one dollar in fines for each can donated to help feed the hungry. Please bring only new, unopened cans within expiration date. No fines? You can help out and make a food donation anyway. Last year, our patrons donated nearly 1,600 cans to this food drive!

Since both the Food Bank and Salvation Army are committed to helping provide for those in need, you can be sure that donations are going to a good cause. Remember: the library is ONLY collecting canned goods for the food drive.

To find out if you owe any fines, simply go to the library's website (www.linebaugh.org) and choose "review my account". Enter your library card number and PIN (typically the last six digits of your library card).

Linebaugh Public Library is located at 105 W. Vine St. in Murfreesboro. The Library is the cornerstone of our community, enriching lives through free resources for learning, fun, and opportunity.

A Quick Update On Hwy. 99 Project

BY MELISSA BUCHANAN

The Hwy. 99 project is quickly progressing, but according to Community Relations Officer, BJ Doughty, the project's completion date still remains December 2010.

"I talked with the project supervisor, who explained that the contractor is now laying the base stone; what goes down before the asphalt," explained Doughty in regard to the new stretch of Hwy. 99 that will run behind Eagleville School.

Grading and drainage work is being performed on other areas of the new state route, but "it's too hard to say whether this particular portion will be completed before the rest of it," she added.

Golf Tournament for The "Did They See Me Do It?" Center

Very few things in life are more difficult and rewarding than taking on the task of helping a disabled child. Most who take upon themselves the task are seldom seen, doing so primarily for the compassion that such undertakings require. In the Eagleville community, right here in Middle Tennessee, is one such example: seldom seen, lightly rewarded, but passionately faithful to their mission. The "Did They See Me Do It?" Center, a non-profit riding stable for autistic and handicapped children, exists for the purpose of making a difference in lives where few things seem to work. Horses and these children mesh in ways that few things do. A child on a horse develops muscles, coordination, and confidence that would otherwise remain dormant. The Center is not a new concept. Myriads exist across the nation and many reside here in Middle Tennessee, but the Center is somewhat unique in that Lysbeth Lancaster, the founder, has for the most part carried the financial burden for the upkeep, insurance, animal care, and coordination of activities since its founding in 2003. Many tens of thousands of dollars have found their way from her heart to the cause over those years. For the first time, the Center has made a decision to reach out into the community and seek help for the undertaking, for the costs are daunting. On October 24th, at Champions Run Golf Course in Eagleville, Tennessee, the "Did They See Me Do It?" Center is holding its first annual golf scramble to offset the expenses of the Center. You don't have to be a golfer to help. Donations are needed, and they are tax deductible. However, if you are a golfer, it is the desire of the Center to field 36 teams of 4 that day for an afternoon of fun and competition while helping children receive care that no one wants to see end. The cost is sixty dollars per player, with a ten dollar mulligan package and a five dollar putting contest. There will be a silent auction, as many businesses in the area have taken upon themselves the burden of helping the Center with services and gifts. If you can help, either by playing in the tournament, fielding a team, giving a gift, volunteering to help the Center in activities, or sponsoring a child or horse, please contact the Center at didtheyseemedoit.com, or if you would prefer to talk to Lysbeth directly, feel free to call her at 615-427-3981.

The Mighty Cranberry

A few weeks ago my parents and a couple of their friends set out for an adventurous senior vacation to Wisconsin. Like any good son, I had all the usual qualms as my mind reeled with visions of my parents speeding through Chicago toward the Wisconsin Dells. As my parents, who were smiling and waving, backed out of the driveway, questions of doom took hold of me. Do they have their eye glasses, medications, koozie cups, sunglasses, and road maps with rest areas clearly marked? I suddenly felt the jolt of role reversal and saw myself in my parents' place on the day I backed out of the driveway for my first solo drive to town.

One of the adventures that my parents enjoyed was the cranberry festival in Warrens, Wisconsin, where my mother fell in love with the mighty cranberry. So, I set out to do a little research on this jewel of a berry, and here is what I found. Cranberries are associated with myths and facts about their potential health benefits. What we do know is that the cranberry is high in fiber, and rich in vitamin C and potassium. Also, it is a potent antioxidant that eradicates free radicals in the body.

The cranberry has shown promise in reducing the H. Pylori bacteria's ability to live in the stomach and cause ulcers. There are many studies with combined evidence on the cranberry's ability to prevent urinary tract infections; however, it is important to point out that while cranberries may be helpful when used in combination with other therapies such as antibiotics, cranberries may not be effective when used alone. The mighty cranberry also shows promise for helping inflammatory conditions, gingivitis, high cholesterol, influenza, wound care, Alzheimer's disease, ischemic stroke, cancer, and heart disease.

Arguably, more research is needed on the health benefits of the cranberry, but preliminary studies have already shown promise in the prevention of cancer, kidney stones, and the reduction of dental plaque and cardiovascular disease. The list of potential benefits seems to be endless, but my favorites are the cranberry's ability to improve memory and to reduce urine odor associated with bladder incontinence.

So, how many cranberries do you need to consume for better health? Well, I am glad you asked! The mighty cranberries are loaded with nutrients, and you might be surprised to learn what a punch they pack. The daily recommendations are very doable: one half cup of fresh berries (or about 2 ounces of dried berries); or 6 ounces of pure cranberry juice, available in health food stores. Ocean Spray® brand cranberry cocktail may be used, but you will need to consume 10 to 12 ounces per day to get the same effect that pure cranberry juice provides. If using 6 ounces of pure juice, I recommend mixing it with sparkling water and adding natural honey for a more refreshing drink. Cranberry supplements are also available from health food stores and pharmacies, but why rob yourself of the taste treat that this natural food offers. Regardless of which product you choose, you can rest assured that you are one step closer to better health.

During Thanksgiving in the 1620s, the Native Americans introduced the Pilgrims to the cranberry; since then, we have continued the tradition of including cranberries in that holiday meal. For centuries Native Americans have understood the healing power of the cranberry, and as usual, it has taken the rest of us a little longer to catch up.

As in all adventures, we learn something and bring a piece of the adventure back with us. My mom really fell in love with the mighty cranberry. She brought back cranberries in forms I never thought of: cranberry syrup, pancakes, wine, jam, candy, salsa, relish, and cranberries sweetened with orange zest. Head out on an adventure to better health and explore the wonderful flavors of the cranberry all over again. You might be surprised how good the cranberry is for you, but once you bite into a cranberry sweetened with orange zest—your taste buds explode with excitement as you are overcome with the taste of good health.

IF YOU'RE 60 OR OVER, ASK ABOUT SHINGLES.

If you had chickenpox as a child, you could get Shingles now. Shingles is caused by the same virus that causes chickenpox. Once you've had chickenpox, the virus stays in your body and can resurface as Shingles--a painful, blistering rash.

There is a shingles vaccine called Zostavax® which helps prevent Shingles and is available here at the Eagleville Drug Center. And best of all, many insurances will help pay for it. Call us for more information.

Rockvale To Land Its Very Own Dollar General Store

By MELISSA BUCHANAN

With site approval from Rutherford County, Rockvale will move one step closer in landing its very own Dollar General Store, according to developer Monte Turner of Turner & Associates of Nashville.

The new Dollar General store will be similar to the 9,100 square foot location in Eagleville, with an additional 3,600 square feet of space for other retail. "Dollar General will be the anchor and it will have space next to it for example, a dry cleaner, hair salon, or even a movie store," explained Turner.

The new Dollar General Store will be located along a stretch of Hwy. 99 near Rockvale Middle School, and will quickly become an added convenience for many Rockvale residents and others who travel through the area.

"We serve many communities where there's a void for convenience retail at discount prices, focusing on outlying areas," explained Turner.

Turner's firm will develop the site, and upon project completion, will lease the facility back to Dollar General, which is headquartered in Goodlettsville, TN. Turner anticipates for the project to reach completion by late March, if the weather cooperates during construction.

Upcoming Artist Featured On Larry's Country Diner

By KEITH BILBREY

Gene Watson will be appearing this Thursday on RFD-TV at 5:00 CST, Sat. 10:00 p.m.

Since Gene Watson entered the top ten with "Love In the Hot Afternoon" in 1975, he has been one of country music's greatest voices and song stylists. Other hits include "Farewell Party", "Fourteen Carat Mind", and "Got No Reason Now For Going Home". Gene drops by the diner to sing a few songs and tell some great stories. Speaking of great stories, no one can tell them better than Grammy Award Winner, Jeannie Seely. An Opry member since 1967, Jeannie is also one of country music's finest songwriters. The diner may ever be the same since this country diva stopped by for an entertaining visit.

Jeannie Seely will be appearing next Thursday on RFD-TV at 5:00 CST, Sat. 10:00 p.m.

Letter To The Editor

A.P. and I, Cornelia A. Elmore, want to express our appreciation for the services rendered to the City of Eagleville for the present Council.

I've recently developed a blood clot, but thanks to the good doctors I had at Vanderbilt in Franklin, I'm feeling great.

A.P. works part-time, but the good coverage that the writers of the Eagleville Times, keeps us well informed.

We'd like to express our interest in a moderate priced sewer system. Many of the population that we've talked to express this sentiment, also!

Sincerely, Mr. & Mrs. A.P. Elmore, III, Eagleville, Tn

Mrs. Ruth Pettus Steele

By Bobbie Sue Shelton-Lonas

Mrs. Ruth Pettus Steele of Nashville, age 94, was buried Monday, October 12, 2009. She was preceded in death by her husband, William Alexander Steele, her parents, Donie and Jesse Pettus and siblings: William, Frances, Leland, and Alice Pettus Hay who was a resident of Eagleville until her death in 2003. She is survived by her son, William Alexander Steele III, daughter, Ruth Steele Stephenson, several grandchildren and a brother, Thomas Pettus of Nolensville. Mrs. Steele was a 1934 graduate of Eagleville High School.

In 1933 Mrs. Steele was captain and played center on a Eagleville High School championship basketball team. During this time, girls played on a court with three divisions, the two forwards being the only ones who could shoot the ball. Centers played in mid-court and guards in the backcourt.

With Mr. Charles Grigsby as coach, this team had gone through an unbeaten season until the finals of the district tournament and they lost. Two days before the region tournament, which was as far as high school teams went in state competition in those days, Bunker Hill dropped out and Eagleville was invited to take it's place.

Eagleville beat Joelton in the finals, 34-32, with the winning goal being made by 14-year old Nora Ralston, who was actually in elementary school.

In addition to winning the equivalent of a state championship, this team may also be well remembered, however, as the last to wear uniforms where stockings went above the knees, and collars were on the blouses. In written memories of the late Coach Grigsby, he quoted "You have to remember, "that it was the middle of the depression. Our uniforms had been in use since about 1921". After the team won the championship, citizens of Eagleville chipped in and bought a new set of uniforms for the team.

The late Mr. Charles Grigsby was coach at Eagleville High School in 1933 and 1934. He later worked for the FBI and was an attorney in Franklin, Tennessee.

Eagleville Florist & Gifts

161 South Main Street
Eagleville, Tenn

(615) 274-6321

According to the Rutherford County Historial Society publications and other records, the first known Rockvale School was a subscription school*, held in a two-story frame building believed to have been near the old telephone office. School quarters were on the lower floor and the upper floor was used as the Masonic Hall. This building was destroyed by fire.

Subscription schools* were usually organized by area parents who wanted a better education for their children. A tuition fee, paid for each student attending, was used to pay for the operation of the school. Several subscription schools were located in the Rockvale-Eagleville area. At this time, the public school system provided only approximately 4-month school term per year for students.

In July, 1874 Kinion Carlton signed a deed, donating one and one-fourth acres of land to School Directors Thomas H. Carlton, R. W. Farris, Trustees J. M. Smith, L. L. Whitehead, J. M. Baugh, J. N. Carlton, B. B. Williams and a Building Committee for a school house, in Rutherford County, State of Tennessee, Civil District, No. 10, for the purpose of building a school house and a place of worship for all religious denominations when a school is not going on. Also stated in the deed, this land was donated for the benefit of the white race and not for the colored race to have anything to do with said land or the house that may be put on the same. The location of this property is on the west side of highway 99 in front of the old Rockvale Cumberland Presbyterian Church. The site is on the Beers Map of 1878.

The old schoolhouse was originally a one-room, frame building for one teacher. In the early 1900's this school was a two-teacher institution with upper classmen as assistants. The building had a front gable and two front doors, which were sheltered by a canopy roof. There were three windows on each side. A fireplace between the two rooms, front and back, was used for heat.

Known principals and teachers were: Robert L. Hayes, principal in 1896, John Woodfin, Sr., Miss Tommy Reynolds, Mr. George Craynor, Rev. J. M. Robinson, a Presbyterian preacher, Ella Henry, Alice Fain, Mr. M. W. Charles, Jinnie Hooper, Lockie Webb, Fannie Robinson, Cora Bain, and Jennie Love. After the last teachers were Arzo Batts and Francis Batey.

Frank M. Carlton, B. Frank Christopher and Frank Hale Jackson were members of the Board of Education for the school for several years.

In 1907-1909 the Public School Law provided revenue for all levels of public education, elementary through college. In the 10th district, J. P. Leathers and others worked for a consolidated school building.

Competition was very strong between the towns of Rockvale and Eagleville for the county-built school. To make the final decision on the location of a consolidated school, the school board decided that the students from both towns would march through the courthouse and be counted. The town with the greater number would get the schoolhouse. Rockvale won; Eagleville then built its own new school.

On June 18, 1910 five and one-sixth acres of land halfway between Concord and Rockvale was purchased from J. S. "Joe" Manning and wife, Bettie for $235, for the location of the new consolidated Concord and Rockvale school. Later another acre was purchased for $100.

A Step Back in Time

By Bobbie Sue Shelton-Lonas

On September 3, 1910, the Rutherford County Board of Education signed a deed to Bettie Carlton for the one and one-fourth acres of the old school property for $535. The school building became a home for Jeff Covington, who drove a school wagon, and later for Blake Giles.

The new schoolhouse on the property purchased from the Manning's, was a white frame, one-story building with five classrooms and three long porches. A large room with a stage across one end was used as a classroom, study hall, and principal's office. The total cost was $1,117.30. Later an L shaped row of stables was built for horses used for the student's transportation to school. Also many students walked to school or they may have been lucky enough to ride in a school wagon. Rockvale has claimed the first county transportation system. In 1911 Mr. Lem Lamb drove a two-horse wagon, at first without a top and then with cover with chairs as seats. He drove from Puckett Store to the Rockvale School. Students paid two dollars per month per child. After the first trip, it is said, Professor Bowling patted one of the horses and remarked, "This has come to stay."

Other principals in this building were Mr. Flint Speers, who followed F. M. Bowling, Mr. Elmer Downman, E. O. Coffman, Neal Elrod, John Zumbro, Raymond McElroy, R. C. Landis, 1920-21; J. E. McCrary, 1921-1924; T. S. Givans, 1924-1929.

Professor F. M. Bowling, a former principal at Eagleville Public School, was the first principal of the new school and served as principal for three years. He was known as one of the best educators in the State. According to reports, he was one of the hardest workers in Rutherford County in the Normal School and High School campaign and his influence was great in the securing of the bond issued asked of the County Court. He was elected a member of the Executive Committee of the Middle Tennessee Educational Association in April 1909. He resigned from Eagleville to accept a Principal's position in the school in Christiana. Evidently, with the new school being built, he decided on accepting the job at Rockvale instead.

Other principals in this building were Mr. Flint Speers, who followed F. M. Bowling, Mr. Elmer Downman, E. O. Coffman, Neal Elrod, John Zumbro, Raymond McElroy, R. C. Landis, 1920-21; J. E. McCrary, 1921-1924; T. S. Givans, 1924-1929.

The first faculty included Margaret Holt Owen, Ida Holt Jackson, Lula Whitehead, and Irene Hudson. Jim Webb was the janitor.

Some of the teachers were: Bessie Jackson Buchanan and Effie Haynes Arendale, about 1913, Bess Maxwell, Mrs. R. C. Landis, Lillie Mae Harding, Cora Lowe, Maud Dabbs, Margaret Lakenan, and Magness Puckett. Among the last teachers were Arzo Betts and Frances Batey. The first graduating class was composed of Eula Lamb and Lillard Martin.

In 1911, the state and county took charge of the school, under the name of Rockvale Public School. The school included eight grades of grammar school and two years of high school and later was re-named as the Rockvale High School. Also in 1911 on Arbor Day, maple trees were set out on campus. Thereupon, Margaret Lakenan composed the Alma Mater song, "In the Shadow of the Maples." Two literary societies, the Tennyson Society and the Lowell Society, furnished such intra-scholastic competition that their colors, blue and white, became the school colors.

In 1923-1924, due to Rockvale School not having a gymnasium, Coach Marvin Scales made a deal with Dr. John Garrett to floor the loft of Garrett's barn to be used for basketball games. Some of the spectators sat on bales of hay. Others stood behind the wire that kept the ball from going out the end of the barn.

As Rockvale School's enrollment increased, due to the school becoming a three-year, then a four-year high school, more space was needed, the old white frame building was torn down and was replace in the summer of 1927 by a brick building on the same site.

between Concord and Rockvale, opened with Prof. Bowling as principal. He is ably assisted by Misses Margaret and Ida Holt.

The opening was splendidly attended by patrons from the several neighborhoods, who have so loyally supported the new school movement, and the presence of such members of school children was most encouraging to those who had worked and planned for the school. There has been some debate about naming the new school.

ROCKVALE HIGH SCHOOL - 1910

The Rockvale High School opened Monday, September 12th with an enrollment of over one hundred and fifty pupils. A large number of the patrons attended the opening and spent the entire morning listening to the interesting and instructive speeches made by visitors and friends. The building, which has just been completed, is one of the most convenient in Rutherford County. It was unanimously decided that a vote of thanks be extended the High School Board and people of the surrounding communities, and we as a committee offer the following resolutions:

Be it resolved, That the people of the tenth district of Rutherford County extend their thanks to the members of the County High School Board for placing a High School in their midst.

Be it further resolved, That they also extend their thanks to the people of the surrounding communities who so faithfully labored for the interests of said school.

Be it also resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be presented to the County High School Board and published in the county papers.

ROCKVALE HIGH SCHOOL

November - 1910

A Thanksgiving service was held at the Rockvale High School on Thursday morning at ten o'clock. Very interesting talks were made by Prof. Bowling, Rev. Seay and others. Miss Hudson favored the audience with a very excellent reading, "The Lost Word", after which the pupils brought forward their offerings, which consisted of various articles, greatly appreciated by the needy to whom they were given. At 7 p.m., a short program was delightfully rendered by Miss Hudson and a few of her pupils. The readings by Miss Hudson were especially enjoyed, she being a reader of great ability, having graduated from the Academy of Dramatic Arts, Cincinnati, Ohio. The next feature of the evening was a basket supper. The auction of baskets by Mr. J. P. Leathers furnished a great deal of amusement for the audience. The proceeds, which amounted to $50, are to be used for the benefit of the school.

Arbor Day was observed on the following Friday. Great interest is being manifested by the people for the improvement of the grounds.

ROCKVALE HIGH SCHOOL - 1912

This school, under the wise supervision of Prof. F. M. Bowling and able assistants, Misses Margaret and Ida Holt, and Lula Whitehead, with Miss Hudson in charge of department of Music and Reading, closed its term on April 26, 1912.

Too much can scarcely be said in praise of the very satisfying results gained through the efforts of these very efficient teachers.

Since the High School is made from a consolidation of district schools, and this only the second year of its existence, one would naturally anticipate difficulties to surmount, but, not withstanding this fact, difficulties have been harmoniously adjusted and the work, seemingly moved on like a song.

Now, any of us who have thought, know that with each effort worthwhile, obstacles present themselves, and, too, that they are not removed by chance—only under some one's wise guidance.

We gladly and heartily attribute this harmonious adjustment to the faithful Superintendent and his able corps of teachers and to the very patient and hearty cooperation of friends and patrons of the school.

The percent of attendance throughout the year, and especially the last month, has been more than could be expected, talking all things into consideration.

Another very remarkable occurrence is, that not one boy or girl was absent from final examination, testifying to the interest manifested by all concerned.

A recital, consisting of music and reading given on the evening of April 27th also bespoke very efficient instructors; results very pleasing and much interest manifested by entire community.

Each one on the program acquitted himself in the most creditable manner, which was very gratifying to teacher and parent.

The sentiment of the entire community is expressed in the desire that each member of present faculty be returned, for they have proved quite an acquisition to the community in a social, moral and spiritual way and each one regrets to have them go.

Longview History Book Group Seeks Information

The Longview community located in the 9th District of Bedford County has a rich history dating back to the early 1800s.

By the 1830s, the rural community already had a store and a church which were built by members of the prominent Tarpley family. In the 1890s, descendants of the Tarpleys built a larger store on the then new Longview Pike, which was joined by a cotton gin, blacksmith shop, post office, a hog slaughtering operation and a livestock pen. In 1891, community leaders had the village incorporated so they could get a school, but the incorporation was repealed about 20 years later. The community got its school which lasted to about 1955.

A committee that is an offshoot of the Rover book committee hopes to capture the history of the Longview community by compiling and publishing a local history book. Committee members are seeking family stories and photographs and other historical information related to the Longview area. They hope to have most of the material collected by Nov. 30.

Arline Sudberry, who led the Rover book effort, is also heading this committee. She can be reached by calling 615 274-6780 and by email at asudberry@att.net. Those who want to submit information or who have questions may also call Nell Holden at 931 294-5645. Also, information about the book effort will be posted on the <http://sudberry.net/longview/> website.

Others currently meeting to work on the book are Rita Milam, Nancy Puckett, Carolyn Smotherman, Larry Ray, Melanie Phelps, Jean Marie Patterson, William King and Glenda Dyer.

Little Stories About You & Me

By Nancy Allen

Vanishing Honeybees

For over 6,000 years humans have harvested honey. Honey is good for us, it's antibacterial and it never spoils.

Some believe it can help if not cure your allergies. Honey is a precious commodity and not just because it taste good and has health benefits.

A hive may have 30,000 bees, the majority being underdeveloped females that do all the work. The drones mate with the queen. There are less than 500 per hive. They mate outside in the air. The queen (usually only one per colony) lays all her eggs in hexagonal beeswax cells that are built by the workers. She also produces chemicals called "pheromones" that regulates the behavior of the other bees.

For the past few years honey bees have been disappearing around the world at an alarming rate—some 800,000 hives. In some areas 80% of the bees were gone in a six month period. One area in China has no bees left and the pear farmers there have had to resort to pollinating their crops by hand.

Although the honey bee was brought to the United States, (the Indians called them "the white man's fly") it would be a sad day if we no longer had this incredible insect. The honey bee accounts for at least one-third of our food supply. Some say if we didn't have the bee we would be reduced to eating corn and rice. We would lose our fruits, vegetables and coffee.

Bee keeper, Megan Johnson, said she became interested in bees when she found a bee tree behind her house. She watched the bees fly away and return with their load. She was intrigued. Megan didn't want to exterminate as some suggested. While she and her children were visiting Traveler's Rest she observed a young boy who was being mentored by a beekeeper. He told her about a course she could take at Ellington Agricultural Center. She went and soon found herself outfitted with bees. Megan has two children and since she home schools, the bees are now a science project. They have five hives: two Russian, one Italian and two that she rescued when they had taken flight. She said her honey is wild, meaning it comes from a variety of flowers, but she has planted white clover and tulip popular so they will have plenty (forging) SP. material. Megan says she will likely harvest their honey next July leaving the majority of the honey for the bees this winter. Clover honey has a sweet, flowery flavor.

State Apiarist, Michael Studer, said there are 1300 registered bee keepers with 11,000 colonies of bees in Tennessee. With the declining bee population, in the past ten years, interest in beekeeping has increased. He said Tennesseans lost 29% of our bees in the past year largely to mite infestations and fungal diseases. If you are interested in beekeeping, the University of Tennessee offers classes. Call John Skinner at 865-974-7138 for information.

Laura On Life

By Laura Snyder

Try A Little Kindness

When did good manners and friendliness become luxuries that nobody in this fast-paced world can afford? It doesn't cost anything to be polite or smile.

Customer service in particular is something most companies can't afford to skimp on because, many times, it may be the only difference between their company and their competition. Yet, most large companies' front line is woefully inept in concepts as simple as politeness and good manners.

I was calling a hotel to confirm a reservation. This was a three-star hotel, mind you. One would think customer service would be a top priority here, because that is the only reason people pay the extra money. This is how my conversation went:

"Holiday Inn, may I help you?" (Keep in mind that she asked me whether she could help me.)

Because I did, indeed, need help, I answered, "Yes, you can" and continued, "I made a reservation for Thursday, Friday, & Saturday night and..."

"Hold, please!"... *click* Then I heard nothing except imaginary crickets before I decided not to play her Hold Game and I hung up.

Now, I know that there are circumstances that require a customer service person put someone on hold, but she didn't even give me an option by asking, "Could you please hold for a moment?" Then at least I could say I'll call back later or that I would be happy to hold. No, even that small courtesy was not extended. She interrupted me mid-sentence and then silenced me by pressing her all-powerful Hold button.

I am quite sure that this is not representative of all Holiday Inn employees. In fact, I've met maids and dishwashers at Holiday Inns that were more polite. Surely, most of the employees are courteous, otherwise how would they have stayed in business for so long? However, this is just one small act of rudeness in a world full of it.

How difficult could it really be to be courteous? A person could easily make it sound like they know they are being rude to put you on hold and apologize for the inconvenience. Even if they are not sincere, it would be better than nothing.

Even when not on the phone, all it takes is eye contact and a smile to put someone at ease. I was walking into the post office the other day, mentally willing every person I passed to answer my hello. Most hurried on their way, head down, with possibly a muffled "hi." Then an older gentleman in overalls and a baseball cap held the door for me, looked me in the eye, smiled, and said "Beautiful day, isn't it?"

I almost tripped and fell into the door frame. I was waiting for a polite answer and still, I was floored when I got one. My whole day was filled with lollipops and rainbows after that. Why should that be so rare?

It does seem that many older people have retained the good manners they were taught when they were youngsters... with the exception of the occasional old grouch at the DMV, of course. There is always one of those, and heaven help you if you get in that person's line.

I have noticed, though, that a smile and a polite inquiry such as, "How is your day going?" may just take the grouch off her face and replace it with a grateful smile. Either that or you'll get a litany of complaints about her arthritis, her no-good ex-husband, and the engine light on her car. So you really are taking a chance here, but why not try it? By listening, you may at least make the next person's experience a little easier.

Everyone is busy. Everyone has places to go, things to do, but there is still room in our day for a smile, polite discourse, and civility. Try it. Not only will you make another person's day sunnier, but you may also find it quite therapeutic yourself.

At the very least, be very careful about how you put people on hold, because you never know... it might be a newspaper columnist.
